USA Curling Weekly Update

Dear USA Curling Athletes,

We hope you're remaining safe during these incredibly challenging and unprecedented times. Last week the AAC and Gerry Geurts hosted a town hall meeting (found here) to discuss questions and concerns regarding the upcoming season. We thank you for bringing forth your inquiries. While a lot of things remain uncertain, what we do know is there will be a return to curling, and it is up us to work together to ensure the return is as seamless as possible.

Increased Communication

USA Curling recognizes our role and responsibility in driving a safe return to sport. We are committed to delivering pertinent information that directly impacts you, your team and your upcoming season as a competitive curler. The National Coaching staff has been working hard to plan for a competitive/championship season and back-up plans are continuing to be revisited as re-entry guidelines change (as they have, and likely will continue to). In the spirit of transparency, we will not always be able to provide total clarity, but we hope that steady communication will allow us the opportunity help you navigate through these uncertainties.
