

from a famine of imaginative ideas, content use beyond their current capabilities, routine planning and unison. Many sections of the country go unrepresented at the American Championships in pairs events, making these contests smallest in entry at the meet, with exception of fours. Perhaps the extension lifts are scaring off the young lads. In the meantime, our judges seem to be hard-pressed trying to reach a consensus on the selection of a champion below the Senior division.

FOURS

It has been fashionable on the part of skating critics for the past few years to dismiss Fours as being the dinosaurs of roller skating competition. While the participation remains small and is largely California dominated, the quality of the 1971 champions was on par with the highly regarded teams of yesteryear. The Senior Champions consisting of Dennis Collier, Karen Marshall, Richard Toon and Judy Jerue from the Rollarena in San Leandro, California must total a half century of roller skating experience and expertise between them and their performance caused many a jaded eyelid to raise in appreciation. They were hotly contested for the title by another team from their same rink. The Novice Fours Championship was a runaway for Bruce Lewis, Julee Miller, Bob Watson and Kim Redway, representing the Holiday Skating Club, Montclair, California.
