Desterhaft and Hilder rock-n' rolled their way to the dance title.

Karen Mejia Dorsett is not at all sure that standing around with three maitre d's is a lot of fun. The three guys, (from left) Don Gates, Jerry Waters and Tim Abell, each decided independently that tuxes were just right for Saturday night. When they appeared together, one of the judges asked if perhaps they planned to wait tables. Hence, the addition of the towels. Coincidentally, each was hoping his pairs team would "wipe up" in the event.

Bobby Sakata proved Special Olympics Roller Skating is for real.

It seems that the U.S. Junior Olympic Roller Skating Championships just get better every year. Although this was only the second year for the J.O. Nationals, the talent and enthusiasm of the 600 participants, and the support of the Hakim family and their staff at Skate World in Troy, Mich., helped to make this a memorable event for all involved.

According to rink operator, Rosemary Hakim, "It was a fabulous meet. It ran very well, kept on schedule, and was well attended. Everybody really did pull together to make it a good meet."

Hakim attributed much of the success of the meet to the organization of Skate World's "wonderful staff," along with the expertise of meet director, Jim Pollard of Redwood City, Calif., and USAC/RS Board Chairman, Marie Walker of Groton, Conn. She also cited the strength of the rink itself. "We have a large facility—40,000 square feet. The skating floor is 16,700 square feet. It's very well appointed. It would be difficult to match."

Great skating wasn't the only reason for excitement last Labor Day weekend. On the final evening of competition, a storm caused a major power failure. "A skater was skating, and all of a sudden, the lights went out. Everything was black. There was no music—nothing," Hakim recalled. Luckily, due to the forethought of her father, the late Shaw D. Hakim, the booster generator he'd installed kicked on within six seconds. Despite a few brief interruptions when the local power company tried to get them back to power, the evening ended on a jubilant note. "You know the old saying, 'the show must go on,'" Hakim laughed.

And on that note, the show continues. Here are the results of the 1988 United States Junior Olympic Championships:
