LONG TRACK
LONG TRACK BASICS

Long track Speedskating has been an Olympic event for men since 1924, with the women’s event joining in at the 1960 Olympic Games. Originally, skaters raced “pack style” events on an outdoor 400-meter oval. Competition was in a single lane, with competitors making turns in the counter clockwise direction. This made for fast and exciting races, with each competitor jockeying for position on the ice around each turn, concluding in a final field sprint at the end of the race. As the sport evolved, skaters continue to skate in the original counterclockwise direction but with technological advancements in equipment, racing suits, and ice arenas, today’s athletes exceed speeds over 40 miles per hour. Skaters race each other in separate lanes at and although visually, the race looks like it puts skater against skater; the two competitors are not racing each other, but rather the clock.

THE RULES
Skaters compete in separate lanes; each lane is divided by snow or markers. The inside lane is shorter than the outside lane. In order for each racer to skate the same distance they must change lanes during each lap at the crossover point in the backstretch. The skater crossing the outer lane to the inner lane has the right of way, since he would have opened a large lead to arrive at the cross-over earlier than his opponent in the shorter inner curve.

Any collision with or obstruction of an opponent during the cross-over can result in a disqualification of the offender and a chance to re-skate by the injured party. When entering a curve, the skater may not cross the lane markers, though referees usually permit the skater to nick the lane markers with his or her left foot.

Skaters compete in several heats called “pairs.” However, unlike in other sports, winning the “pair” does not necessarily mean the skater will move up to another “bracket,” “place,” or have won the event. The winner of the event is actually determined strictly on time. The fastest competitor of the day wins the event, no matter what final pair they competed in. Pairs and lane assignments are determined by a drawing conducted before the event. Names are drawn two at a time from each seeding pool, forming a pair. Each pair skates in the order in which it was drawn.

THE START
Skaters start either side-by-side or staggered, depending on the distance of the race. The 500 meter and 10,000 meter are side-by-side starts, and the rest are all staggered. The skater starting in the inner track wears a white armband; the skater in the outer lane wears a red armband. When the starter orders “go to the start,” both skaters move to the area between the pre-starting line and the starting line. At the word “ready,” both skaters assume their exact starting positions, holding them until the starter fires the gun. The group is allowed one warning for a false start before disqualification.

The first false start will be given to both skaters, no matter who is at fault. This is a relatively new rule that was created in an effort to reduce false starts. If a skater has another false start they will be disqualified and the remaining skater of the pair skates alone.

THE FINISH
A skater has completed the distance when he or she has touched or reached the finish line with his or her skates, as recorded by an electric eye beam. The winner for each event is the skater with the lowest time, measured to 1/100th of a second, after all the pairs have raced. If two skaters tie, they shall be judged as tied - no deciding heats or tiebreakers are allowed.

DISQUALIFICATION
A skater can be disqualified for the following infractions:
- Failure to appear promptly at the start.
- Two false starts.
- Crossing lane markers while in the curves. Subject to the ruling from the referee.
- Failure to change lanes in the crossing area.
LONG TRACK BASICS

-Interfering with an opponent when changing lanes. Subject to ruling from the referee.
-Interfering with an opponent when passing or being passed. Usually occurs in the quartet starts.

FALLS
Skaters who fall during the course of a race are allowed to get up and continue for distances less than 10,000 or 5,000 meters. If a skater falls before the finish line, the time is taken when the skater’s skate crosses the finish line, even if the skater is out of his or her lane.

THE DISTANCES
Men's/Women's 500 meter
Start: Side by side. Located at the beginning of the finish straight section of the track.
Distance: 1.25 laps.

Men's/Women's 1,000 meter
Start: Staggered, located in the middle of the backstretch-crossover straight section.
Distance: 2.5 laps, finishing the middle of the final straight.

Men's/Women's 1,500 meter
Start: Staggered, located at the start of the backstretch-crossover straight section of the track.
Distance: 3.75 laps, finishing at the end of the finish straight.

Women's/Junior Men 3,000 meter
Start: Staggered, located at the end of the backstretch-crossover straight section of the track.
Distance: Seven-and-one-half laps, finishing at the end of the finish straight.

Men's/Women's 5,000 meter
Start: Staggered, located at the end of the backstretch-crossover straight section of the track.
Distance: Twelve-and-one-half laps, finishing at the end of the finish straight.

Men's 10,000 meter
Start: This is the same place as the finish, located at the end of the start/finish straight.
Distance: Twenty-five laps.

Team Pursuit
This event began as an exhibition event in 2003 at World Cup events and was first introduced at the 1997 World Junior Championships. It became an Olympic event at the Torino Winter Games in 2006. One nation of three skaters race against another nation’s three skaters in a single lane, beginning at opposite sides of the track. Men race eight laps, ladies race six laps. The finish time is when the third person crosses the finish line. Five skaters total may be named to the Pursuit team.

Mass Start
The Mass Start will make its Olympic debut at the Olympic Winter Games PeyongChang 2018. The race is a ‘pack style,’ 16-lap race with four sprint laps where points are awarded. The first three athletes to cross the finish line end up on the podium, while the other skaters are ranked based on points awarded during the sprints. The Mass Start was introduced to the World Cup circuit during the 2011-12 season.

PERSONAL
Mia started inline skating when she was eight years old and decided to make the switch to ice so that she could chase the Olympic dream at the age of 13...After the 2010 Olympic Trials, Mia choose to take a break from speed skating and found a new passion for cycling where she raced professionally for five years...She returned to speed skating in early 2016 after realizing her love for the sport still remained...After skating she would love to pursue a career in the Culinary Arts...Her parents, Karen and Dominic, have owned an Italian Restaurant her entire life...Mia says, “There is nothing better then growing up in a kitchen. The lessons and responsibilities you learn are irreplaceable, with the greatest reward being the amount of pizza you get to eat”...As a returning athlete, she wants to cherish every moment and live her life by the following words: “If you can’t stop thinking about it, don’t stop working for it.”
