US Speedskating is a non-profit organization recognized by the United States Olympic Committee and the International Skating Union as the governing body for the sport of speed skating in the United States.

US Speedskating’s mission is to be one of the premier speed skating organizations in the world through excellence in leadership, development and performance. To date, US Speedskating has won 86 Olympic medals, making it the most successful winter sport in the U.S.

The organization was founded in 1965, when a small group of speed skating enthusiasts broke away from the Amateur Skating Union (ASU) to form the United States International Speedskating Association (USISA). The USISA’s primary responsibility at that time was to select the world teams. The organization adopted the name “US Speedskating” in 1993. In June 2001, the US Speedskating Board of Directors approved a merger with the ASU. The union took place in March of 2002.

US Speedskating’s National Headquarters is located in Salt Lake City, Utah, at the Utah Olympic Oval. Both the long track and short track national training programs are based at the 2002 Olympic venue, allowing athletes to train in both disciplines.

The new home of US Speedskating, the Kearns Athlete & Event Center (KATEC), is currently under construction directly next to the Oval and is estimated to be completed in the Fall of 2018. With support from Salt Lake County and the State of Utah, the new facility will encourage the cross-pollination of youth and public training alongside Olympians with US Speedskating’s elite athlete training facilities. It will also be the new home of the US Speedskating Hall of Fame.

US Speedskating is a member of the US Olympic Committee (USOC) and the International Skating Union (ISU).
As the National Governing Body for the sport, US Speedskating is responsible for the conduct and administration of speed skating in the United States. In this capacity, US Speedskating establishes and implements the rules, policies and procedures, conducts the national championships and other domestic events, disseminates safety and sports medicine information and selects athletes to represent the United States in international competition.

Long track Speed Skating has been an Olympic event for men since 1924, with the women’s event joining in at the 1960 Olympic Games. Originally, skaters raced “pack style” events on an outdoor 400-meter oval. Competition was in a single lane, with competitors making turns in the counter clockwise direction. This made for fast and exciting races, with each competitor jockeying for position on the ice around each turn, concluding in a final field sprint at the end of the race. As the sport evolved, skaters continue to skate in the original counterclockwise direction but with technological advancements in equipment, racing suits, and ice arenas, today’s athletes exceed speeds over 40 miles per hour. Skaters race each other in separate lanes at and although visually, the race looks like it puts skater against skater; the two competitors are not racing each other, but rather the clock.

THE RULES

Skaters compete in separate lanes; each lane is divided by snow or markers. The inside lane is shorter than the outside lane. In order for each racer to skate the same distance they must change lanes during each lap at the crossover point in the backstretch. The skater crossing the outer lane to the inner lane has the right of way, since he would have opened a large lead to arrive at the cross-over earlier than his opponent in the shorter inner curve.

Any collision with or obstruction of an opponent during the cross-over can result in a disqualification of the offender and a chance to re-skate by the injured party. When entering a curve, the skater may not cross the lane markers, though referees usually permit the skater to nick the lane markers with his or her left foot.

Skaters compete in several heats called “pairs.” However, unlike in other sports, winning the “pair” does not necessarily mean the skater will move up to another “bracket,” “place,” or have won the event. The winner of the event is actually determined strictly on time. The fastest competitor of the day wins the event, no matter what final pair they competed in. Pairs and lane assignments are determined by a drawing conducted before the event. Names are drawn two at a time from each seeding pool, forming a pair. Each pair skates in the order in which it was drawn.

THE START

Skaters start either side-by-side or staggered, depending on the distance of the race. The 500 meter and 10,000 meter are side-by-side starts, and the rest are all staggered. The skater starting in the inner track wears a white armband; the skater in the outer lane wears a red armband. When the starter orders “go to the start,” both skaters move to the area between the pre-starting line and the starting line. At the word “ready,” both skaters assume their exact starting positions, holding them until the starter fires the gun. The group is allowed one warning for a false start before disqualification.

The first false start will be given to both skaters, no matter who is at fault. This is a relatively new rule that was created in an effort to reduce false starts. If a skater has another false start they will be disqualified and the remaining skater of the pair skates alone.

THE FINISH

A skater has completed the distance when he or she has touched or reached the finish line with his or her skates, as recorded by an electric eye beam. The winner for each event is the skater with the lowest time, measured to 1/100th of a second, after all the pairs have raced. If two skaters tie, they shall be judged as tied - no deciding heats or tiebreakers are allowed.
DISQUALIFICATION
A skater can be disqualified for the following infractions:
- Failure to appear promptly at the start.
- Two false starts.
- Crossing lane markers while in the curves. Subject to the ruling from the referee.
- Failure to change lanes in the crossing area.
- Interfering with an opponent when changing lanes. Subject to ruling from the referee.
- Interfering with an opponent when passing or being passed. Usually occurs in the quartet starts.

FALLS
Skaters who fall during the course of a race are allowed to get up and continue for distances less than 10,000 or 5,000 meters. If a skater falls before the finish line, the time is taken when the skater’s skate crosses the finish line, even if the skater is out of his or her lane.

THE DISTANCES
Men’s/Women’s 500 meter
Start: Side by side. Located at the beginning of the finish straight section of the track.
Distance: 1.25 laps.

Men’s/Women’s 1,000 meter
Start: Staggered, located in the middle of the backstretch-crossover straight section.
Distance: 2.5 laps, finishing the middle of the final straight.

Men’s/Women’s 1,500 meter
Start: Staggered, located at the start of the backstretch-crossover straight section of the track.
Distance: 3.75 laps, finishing at the end of the finish straight.

Women’s 3,000 meter
Start: Staggered, located at the end of the backstretch-crossover straight section of the track.
Distance: Seven-and-one-half laps, finishing at the end of the finish straight.

Men’s/Women’s 5,000 meter
Start: Staggered, located at the end of the backstretch-crossover straight section of the track.
Distance: Twelve-and-one-half laps, finishing at the end of the finish straight.

Men’s 10,000 meter
Start: This is the same place as the finish, located at the end of the start/finish straight.
Distance: Twenty-five laps.

Team Pursuit
This event began as an exhibition event in 2003 at World Cup events and was first introduced at the 1997 World Junior Championships. It became an Olympic event at the Torino Winter Games in 2006. One nation of three skaters race against another nation's three skaters in a single lane, beginning at opposite sides of the track. Men race eight laps, ladies race six laps. The finish time is when the third person crosses the finish line. Five skaters total may be named to the Pursuit team.

Mass Start
The Mass Start will make its Olympic debut at the Olympic Winter Games PeyongChang 2018. The race is a ‘pack style,’ 16-lap race with four sprint laps where points are awarded. The first three athletes to cross the finish line end up on the podium, while the other skaters are ranked based on points awarded during the sprints. The Mass Start was introduced to the World Cup circuit during the 2011-12 season.

Short track made its official Olympic debut at the 1992 Winter Games, having been a demonstration sport in 1988. It is contested on an indoor rink on a 111-meter oval track - an international size hockey rink (30 x 60 meters).

Short track races are fast and exciting. Skaters can reach speeds up to 35 mph. Skaters race in "packs" of four to six skaters, and unlike Long Track racing, race against each other rather than the clock. Times are kept in short track racing for the sole purpose of establishing local, national and world records. Spectators are thrilled by the action of a fast-moving pack on a small track. The fast pace along with the opportunity for contact and occasional spills make for some of the most exciting racing in the world.

Skaters not only possess a combination of incredible power and speed, but must also be masters of technique and strategy. Endurance is critical as skaters often compete in a series of elimination heats, quarterfinals, semifinals and finals. The rest time between these competitions can sometimes be as little as 20 minutes.

The ability to read a race and its competition is vital to getting in position for the win. A typical strategy might involve a competitor taking the lead quickly and setting a fast pace in an effort to "burn out" the other skaters. There are also times when a slow pace may be set with skaters jockeying for position in anticipation of a sprint for the finish line during the last three or four laps.

EQUIPMENT

Because of the size of the track and sharp turns, the walls of the rink are padded to minimize injuries. Skaters wear protective equipment such as hard shell helmets, gloves with carbon fiber fingertips, knee pads, neck guards, shin guards, and cut resistant uniforms.

Short track skates are molded to the foot and reinforced in the ankles to counteract the centrifugal force of the sharp turns. Blades are offset to proved greater lean - the blade on the left boot is set on the outside of the boot and the blade on the right boot is set on the inside of the boot. Skaters may also bend their blades matching the direction of the curve of the track assisting them with better steering and traction when negotiating their turns.

THE RULES

Usually, competitors skate a series of heats or elimination rounds for the individual events. Heats have up to six skaters, with the top two finishers from each heat advancing to the next round.

Each skater is allowed one false start, but will be disqualified if they are the cause of a second false start. The start is crucial to the skater, particularly in the shorter distances, as the start is not staggered and a skater can move to the inside immediately. Skaters must skate outside the blocks during the entire race, although a finger can skim the surface of the ice inside the blocks as long as the skater rounds the blocks.

PASSING

Passing must be done cleanly and without body contact. Passing is tricky, and skaters take advantage of key areas to pass. If the lead skater strays too far from the track markers, he or she can be passed on the inside by an alert competitor. If the track is skated tightly by the pack, passing must then be done on the outside.

The rules on passing other skaters are strict. One infraction and a skater can be disqualified. The lead skater has the right of way and the passing skater must assume responsibility for avoiding body contact. The most frequent passing occurs when a skater passes on the inside near the first or second block of the corner.

Intentionally pushing, obstructing or colliding with another racer calls for the offender’s disqualification and a chance for the next round by the victim of the offense. Improperly crossing the course or “cross-tracking” is also prohibited, as is kicking your skate across the finish line. A bell warns the skaters when they are one lap from the finish.
