Let me say, up front, that I have mixed feelings on many of the arguments surrounding competitive lifestyles. But of course, whenever a situation pertains to me specifically, I feel compelled to give it at least a little extra thought. You know, kind of like when you look at a draw sheet to find that you’ll feed into someone from your own club in one or two advances (if you get there) and you can’t figure out how on earth the TD failed to see such an obvious conflict? One person, one point of view ...

So what’s the point? It’s similar to the “glass ceiling” theory as it applies to women in business — you can only get so far. Racquetball’s glass ceiling — at least as far as most of us are concerned — is the Open division. Gender notwithstanding, it’s clearly a quantum leap between the “A” skill division and the “Open.” And nothing makes that more obvious than a trip to national singles!

So here’s where I fit in (and presumably many of you ...). I play Open in Colorado during the regular season. Not because I train, or (heaven forbid!) practice, but simply due to 20-years-worth of on-court experience that has taught me where the ball is going to end up most of the time — and what to do with it when it gets there. If I ever did practice (bite your tongue), there’s just no telling how good I might become. Sigh.

Still, when I consider what division to play at Nationals, the mere thought of going up against big-name Open division players like Jackie Paraiso or Robin Levine strikes fear in my heart. Both very nice people, mind you, but these women are serious! But does that make it fair for me to play “A’s”? Not really — and until this year I had a lot of ethical angst about it.

Now I have an option. This year, National Singles offers an “Elite” division for which I fully expect to qualify. I’ll enter Open, where I belong, then try to “build character” against someone who has a much more legitimate shot at making the U.S. Team than I ever will. Then, with my scruples intact, I’ll drop down into what is called the “Elite” division for continued regulation play against what I hope will shake out to be my peer group.

It’s just another little “tweak” to a system that at least tries to accommodate as many everyday players as possible. And I, for one, intend to make use of it ... with no mixed feelings whatsoever!

GOOD CHOICE
As a racquetball player and promoter, court club owner, and a father of three racquetball hopefuls I applaud your article in the Jan/Feb issue regarding Sudsy's "Hard Choice." Bringing this topic up at this time when our nation is in a tailspin regarding the honesty of our worlds' most powerful and influential leader is, I think, of major importance. I am however disappointed that your stance on this issue wasn't, shall I say, a little more candid and a little less politically correct.

I can tell you as a sports spectator, be it professional or amateur that there is nothing more refreshing than when a participant calls an infraction on himself. This is the way it should be. Plain and simple! The ref is there to do the best that he can, and if both the players have any integrity at all the ref will have an easy as well as enjoyable task. We as players and promoters of this sport should be striving to get this message out to all. I appeal to all in our sport, especially the greats like Sudsy and Cliff to understand the impact that they have on the rest of the racquetball playing population. Take a stance and do the right thing. Play fair and call it like it is. The ref is there to make the calls, my opponent cheated on me, it all works out in the end, all pro athletes do it... the list is endless. Maybe it would show slightly more integrity if a player just admitted, "I was afraid to lose, so I cheated." Competitive situations, and the drive to reach certain goals, brings with them an enormous amount of pressure. Winning at any cost is usually the better alternative than losing. Most athletes won't admit this, but integrity is always lost to some degree each time we cross the fragile line of winning at any cost.

I thank Kevin for writing this article. I'm sure to some it will reinforce their attitude that cheating is not only acceptable, but "the way it is." To the rest of us, I hope the article helps us to look at how we go about achieving the goals we set for ourselves, regardless of the money or fame they may bring to us.

STUDY BREAK
An important resource from which to draw new players into the sport are the colleges and universities across the country. At the recent Leadership Conference we heard that Dr. Tim Miller (USRA Collegiate Coordinator, Central Region) - initially using AmPRO and Wilson players - will be contacting college recreation departments to organize vacant programs, assist in leadership roles and further educate collegiate racquetball instructors about the sport.

An excellent resource available to them is a text by Jim Hiser, Ph.D. The book, Winning Edges Series: Racquetball, is well-organized into fifteen chapters which could easily fit in a semester-long racquetball class. The information is straightforward and includes everything — from equipment and rules to basic shots and strategies to nutritional, conditioning and mental aspects of the sport. Also accompanying the text is a test bank which contains pertinent questions and their answers with regards to the chapters.

As adviser for the UW-Madison racquetball club, I've started using this text to better educate my club members. Every player seems to lack some type of information and this text pretty much covers every aspect of the sport. Also accompanying the text is a test bank which contains pertinent questions and their answers with regards to the chapters.

As adviser for the UW-Madison racquetball club, I've started using this text to better educate my club members. And the text can easily be adapted to teach juniors at your club; another great way to introduce new players to our sport.

I WANT MY "R" TV

I just want to thank you and your staff for publishing a magazine that covers a sport that doesn’t receive the mainstream support it deserves.

I get so angry at ESPN for covering other "sports" events that raise the "who cares" flag in my mind. For me, racquetball is much more interesting to watch than a dog show, an equestrian event, or some other activity that appears to have a smaller fan base than racquetball.

Racquetball deserves more airtime than it currently receives. And, when ESPN does cover racquetball, it airs the event late at night – which doesn’t allow those who are not familiar with racquetball to see how great a game it is.

Maybe we need to have more prestigious events, like the Promus U.S. Open with its traveling glass-court, that are attractive enough for ESPN to cover. The PGA has four major tournaments that are televised. Why can’t racquetball have something along those lines?

I really like to watch racquetball on television. Because major tournaments are held all over the country, it is impossible to see them all. Televised events would allow those of us who don’t have time or resources to travel to all over the country to see racquetball at its highest level.

I have found that the last two U.S. Opens, which I have on tape, have allowed me to improve my game because I can see for myself how racquetball is played and I can see strategies and techniques that I can incorporate into my game. I certainly hope that those who love the sport will write to ESPN and demand more coverage of racquetball, and that those who can facilitate this request will do so.

Approximately 500 entrants converged on the Los Caballeros Sports Village in Fountain Valley, California to compete in the Pro Kennex International Racquetball Federation World Junior Racquetball Championships this past December 18-22. Ten countries competed for 31 individual and doubles championships, as well as the boys', girls' and overall team world titles.

The U.S. Junior National Team won its eighth consecutive world team championship, outdistancing Mexico, 1,494.5 to 938. Canada finished third with 505 points, while Ireland, attending its first-ever World Junior Championships, tallied 109.

10-year-old Mexican Tabbed “Best Ever”

Described as “the best I’ve ever seen at his age” by tournament director Jim Hiser, Mexico’s David Ortega cruised past all competition in the boys’ 10-and-under bracket to win his fourth world junior singles title at the 1998 Pro Kennex IRF World Junior Championships this past December in Fountain Valley, California.

“He (Ortega) has great racquet control,” said author and instructor Jim Hiser. “David has it all.”

Meanwhile, Chris Coy of Elk City, Oklahoma began his trek to the semifinals by defeating Brandon Callihan, 15-3, 15-10 in a feeder match, then fifth-seeded Edson Martinez of Mexico, 15-2, 15-12 in the round of 32. Rather amazing for an unseeded player with a prosthetic lower left leg. Young Coy was born with cancer in his stomach, which spread to his legs via vascular infection.

At age four, Coy’s left foot and ankle were amputated. He travels to Louisiana every six months for a checkup, where he usually receives a new prosthetic leg due to his strenuous physical activities and the frequent breakage.

Nonetheless, Coy continued to upset the field by downing Ireland’s Seamus Power (4-15, 15-13, 11-8) in the round of 16 and Mike Keddie (15-3, 5-15, 11-10) in the quarterfinals. The 4-foot-1, 70-pound Oklahoman then disposed of Mexico’s Jose Ramos 15-11, 15-5 in the semis. Ramos had just upset top-ranked Andrew Grissom of Campbell, California, 14-15, 15-13, 11-6.

March – April 1999
Ortega took charge early in the finale, not allowing Coy to get on track, winning 15-6 in game one. Coy battled back in the second frame, but was unable to overcome the talented Mexican, eventually falling 15-10.

“He's awesome . . . he's like Sudsy (Monchik),” Coy said of his opponent. “He was just killin’ everything. I would set him up and he would kill it.”

Monchik, now ranked No. 2 in the world on the men’s professional tour, was commonly referred to as the greatest junior ever, until now.

“He (Ortega) has a better all-around game than Sudsy did at that age,” Hiser said. “Sudsy was more of a crowd pleaser, but David has a better game.”

Carson “graduates” with another Gold

Californian Rocky Carson, of Santa Maria, dominated the boys’ 18-and-under singles division – allowing an average of only 5.7 points per 15-point game – en route to his third consecutive world singles crown. The Saddleback College sophomore won each of his five matches without dropping a single game.

Having won the 18’s the past two years, Carson was positioned atop the bracket as the No. 1 seed. Last year’s boys’ 16-and-under champ Kris Odegard of Canada held the second seed. But Odegard was upset by the U.S. National Team’s Josh Tucker, 15-12, 9-15, 11-3, in the quarterfinals.

Tucker went on to cruise past 1997 runner-up Ryan Staten of Dodge City, Kansas in the semifinals, 15-6, 15-5. In the top half of the draw, Carson was destroying all opposition, including Wyoming’s James Ford in the quarters, 15-2, 15-4. The soon-to-be-crowned three-time 18-and-under champion then put away U.S. teammate Willie Tilton 15-6, 15-11 to reach the finals.

There, Carson toppled 7th-seeded Tucker in straight games of 15-7, 15-3. Carson, who finished second in the boys’ 18-and-under doubles bracket with Tucker (losing to Ford and Staten, 15-11, 15-6), closed out his junior career with five world championships, and tying Sudsy Monchik’s record for the most world junior singles titles won in a division (three). Monchik, the current Promus U.S. OPEN champion, captured three boys 18’s singles crowns from 1991-93.
Canadian Super-Girls

Over the past two years, Canadians have dominated the girls' 18-, 16- and 14-and-under singles divisions. More accurately stated, Lisa Kerr of White Rock, British Columbia and Karina Odegard of Saskatoon, Saskatchewan, have won five of the past six world titles in those age groups.

Kerr, the defending champ, won a hard-fought 18-and-under championship by overcoming U.S. national titleist and No. 2 seed Brooke Crawford of Klamath Falls, Oregon, 15-6, 11-15, 11-8. Iowa's fourth seeded Sara Borland may have provided Kerr with her stiffest test, in a 15-5, 8-15, 11-10 semifinal contest.

Odegard, winner of the '97 girls' 14's, pounded fellow Canuck Veronique Guillemette 15-4, 15-5 in the 16-and-under draw finale. Only one opponent scored more than five points against the 6-foot Odegard, whose seven world junior singles titles are tied for the most in history.

Ohio's Crystal Winfrey spoiled the Canadian's chances to repeat their '97 sweep of the three elder divisions. Winfrey lived up to her top seeding in the girls' 14-and-under event by moving past Lindsay Deutsch (15-5, 14-15, 11-2) in the semis and Adrienne Fisher (15-14, 15-9) in the finals. Fisher, of Westerville, Ohio, then re-grouped to capture the girls' 12-and-under crown, 15-11, 15-7 over fellow American Derai Darling of Seaside, Oregon.

Record Books Challenged

Together, Shane Vanderson of Dublin, Ohio and Jack Huczek, of Rochester Hills, Michigan own 22 world junior titles in both singles and doubles. Huczek is tied with Canada's Odegard for the most world singles gold medals as he won his seventh in a row this year with a punishing 15-4, 15-7 victory over Bart Crawford in the finals of the boys' 14-

Vanderson captured the 16's by downing Mexico's Erwin Bernal 15-2, 13-15, 11-5 for his sixth world singles crown. "Vandy" holds...

Mexico is Grassroots Champ

Mexico swept the boy’s 12-, 10-, 8- and 8-and-under multi-bounce singles titles as Chihuahuans Juan Arzate took the 12’s, David Ortega earned his sixth world junior crown as he won the 10’s and Ruben Estrada captured both 8-and-nder brackets. The young Mexican players were also victorious in the boy’s 12- and 10-and-under doubles divisions. For the past three years, Mexico has won seven of nine possible championships in the boys’ 10-, 8- and 8-and-under multi-bounce divisions.

In all, nearly 400 players wore their respective country’s colors and competed for the many world junior titles available at this event. Ireland flew 14 players to Fountain Valley for a first-ever appearance for “Junior Team Ireland,” while hosting players from the U.S. represented 34 states. Mexico’s contingent consisted of 64 athletes, while Costa Rica, led by coach and adult national team member Allan Chacon, showcased an improving junior program with 11 hopefuls. South America fielded three other countries with players from Bolivia, Colombia and Venezuela.

Looking ahead to next year, dominant players like USA’s Rocky Carson and Canada’s Lisa Kerr will move on, while the Karina Odegard’s, Jack Huczek’s and David Ortega’s will move up. Moving onward and upward ... sounds like a great ‘junior’ plan.

Flu Central Pro Am in Lakewood
Paraiso stays on Track

Maybe catching the flu isn’t always such a bad deal. It certainly wasn’t too painful when the WIRT caught the Flu (Central) as a title sponsor this past December at the Lakewood Athletic Club on the outskirts of Denver.

After visiting the LAC in 1996, the women’s tour failed to return in ‘97, much to the disappointment of Flu Central owner Missy Zantop and local enthusiast Carol Zimlinghaus, both of Littleton, Colorado.

“Two years ago, the women (WIRT) were here and we really enjoyed watching them,” said Zantop, a local A-level player. “Then, last year, they weren’t and we missed them.”

Had the WIRT not returned to Lakewood just before Christmas, Colorado fans would have missed a stellar performance by the world’s No. 1 player, Jackie Paraiso.

Following a first-round bye, Paraiso brought 6-foot Canadian Karina Odegard down to earth with an 11-2, 11-5, 11-2 victory in the round of 16. Chicago resident Kerri Stoffregen provided the tour’s top player with a little more competition in the quarterfinals, but not enough, as the scores read 11-3, 11-3, 9-11, 11-9.

Current world champion and second-seeded Christie Van Hees cruised past fellow Canadian Amanda MacDonald 11-4, 11-6, 11-0 in the 16’s. MacDonald had just defeated tournament sponsor Zimlinghaus 11-4, 11-2, 11-3 in the opening round, while Van Hees had crushed Janet Myers and Molly O’Brien in the quarters and semifinals, respectively.

In the best match of her advance, Paraiso fought off a determined Cheryl Gudinas 11-9, 10-12, 7-11, 11-6, 11-5 in the semis. Seeded fourth, Gudinas entered the event ranked fourth on the WIRT ladder behind #1 Paraiso, #2 Van Hees and an injured #3 Robin Levine. Nonetheless, sixth-ranked Lydia Hammock was bumped up into the third seed over Gudinas in Levine’s absence.

A rematch of their Memphis meeting, Van Hees and Paraiso took to the court in what turned out to be a repeat performance of the November finale. Paraiso disposed of the young Canuck in a quick 11-9, 11-6, 11-6 contest.
"Honestly, I really don't know what my problem was today," Van Hees said. "It was just a really, really bad day. I need to go home and reconsider a bunch of things about my game. Since October, it just hasn't been right."

The Vancouver native had won back-to-back matches against Paraiso before losing at the Promus U.S. OPEN and the Flu Central Pro-Am tour events. Van Hees claims a 2-3 head-to-head record against Paraiso on the WIRT circuit.

"I felt focused," Paraiso said. "A couple of my shots were up, but I think that's true with everybody's game here because of the altitude. I thought I kept her out of her game pretty well."

For the 32-year-old mother of one, her quest of winning a second pro tour title is just that much closer. Paraiso was the last player to win the women's tour crown before Michelle Gould's reign of sixth consecutive season championships.

Chrysler Plymouth Pro-Am

Paraiso vs. Gudinas

The mainstays of the women's pro tour have always been the events held in the Northeast. With the direct involvement of commissioner Molly O'Brien, the Baltimore, Philadelphia, and other area events have served as a hub for women's racquetball for over ten years. In fact, 1999 marks the eleventh year for the "Women's Grand Slam."

Chalfont, Pennsylvania (Philadelphia to those unfamiliar with local geography) and the famous Highpoint Athletic Club, this year teamed up with Chrysler/Plymouth – in conjunction with its regional promotion of "Woman of the Year" – to host the Chrysler/Plymouth Pro-Am.

WIRT Profile

reported by Kevin Vicroy [Lakewood] & Marvin Quertermous [Chalfont]
great involvement from the auto giant and plenty of regional publicity for the women’s pros, this year’s Chalfont event attracted a lot of attention for the WIRT, women’s sports in general, and the support they are getting from the manufacturer of some very impressive automobiles.

After the impact Christie Van Hees made with her big win in Baltimore earlier this season, plus an impressive showing in the Promus U.S. Open, she was certainly the one to beat going into the event. But a midwinter bout with the flu kept Christie off the courts and out of the draw.

Impressive showings included #4 seed Kersten Hallander with a three game win over the veteran O’Brien and a game one victory before falling to #1 seed Jackie Paraiso in the semis. Unseeded and a relative unknown, Aimee Roehler fought her way past #6 seed Janet Myers and even went on to post a great effort and a near miss in game one against #2 seed Cheryl Gudinas in the other semi. Regular touring pros Michelle Wiragh and Anita Maldonado also fell to Gudinas along the way.

The final – pitting rivals Paraiso and Gudinas – was all that a final should be. These are two of the fastest and hardest hitting women’s pros and they play one another with a ferocious intensity. While Gudinas’ court savvy and grit combined with a solid fundamental game have allowed her to cover more ground than any other pro in the 90’s, Paraiso’s experience and ability to stay cool under pressure made all the difference. After a brutal extended first game, then trading wins in games two and three, Paraiso held off Gudinas’ attack to capture the second event of the women’s grand slam. The women’s tour has always been famous for putting on first class events, and with Paraiso and Gudinas slugging it out, they’ve become a showcase for some very intense racquetball as well.

A trademark of WIRT events has always been to make use of event publicity to help some very worthwhile causes. In Chalfont, the pros teamed with some special amateurs on Thursday night for some pro-am doubles to benefit the American Cancer Society. Even with a terrible storm threatening the area, the special evening raised more than a few dollars to fight cancer.

Locker Loves Lakewood

Mike Locker made it to the finals? Of the professional draw? That's right. The St. Paul, Minnesota, native enjoyed the finest run of his racquetball career at the APH Service Company Pro-Am in early December at the Lakewood Athletic Club, west of downtown Denver.

Still smiling despite an 11-4, 11-4, 11-5 thumping by top-seeded Cliff Swain in the finals, Locker said, “Cliff played very well. I really enjoyed the lesson . . . I really did. I watched him play all week and I think Cliff's got a little vengeance now from the U.S. OPEN. He's number one . . . and number one for a reason. I learned that today.”

After a four-game downing of Dan Llacera in the first round, the gravelly-voiced Locker opened some eyes in the round of 16 with a stunning 8-11, 11-9, 12-10, 11-9 upset of No. 2 seed Sudsy Monchik.

“I packed my bags hoping I would win in the 32's and make it to the 16's,” said Locker, whose second-place finish vaulted him six spots in the IRT rankings to #20. “I knew I would play into Sudsy. I hadn’t played Suds, so I figured it would be an experience for me to play him. It ended up being a great experience.”

Sure, if you call doing your laundry in the shower a great time. Then again, Locker had never finished beyond the round of 16 in an IRT stop. He might as well take the good with the bad.

“John Ellis loaned me some clothes so I could finish the tournament,” Locker said of his crazy weekend. “I was scheduled to fly home Friday morning at 7 a.m. to go and play in my own tournament. Next thing you know, I’m here until Sunday and playing in the finals. It was bizarre.”

Maybe not as bizarre as Locker’s game style. Like Robert Redford’s last swing in “The Natural,” every serve Locker hit appeared to fly in slow motion.

“When I’m in the service box, I try to hit a controlled serve, if you will,” he said. “I try to be as deceiving as possible and just make sure that I get it in. I almost go for a short serve. With the pace that I’m hitting it, you can literally read ‘ProPenn’ on the ball.”

In the top-half of the bracket, Swain swept through his first four rounds losing only one game – to Rocky Carson in the 16's. The tour's top player disposed of H.R. Coe (11-4, 11-5, 11-4), Carson (11-8, 12-10, 4-11, 11-4) and Adam Karp (11-5, 12-10, 11-9) in the first three rounds, respectively.

Texan Doug Eagle earned an invitation to play Swain in the semifinals by upsetting fifth seed Derek Robinson 5-11, 11-6, 7-11, 11-3, 11-6 in the 16's and Luis Bustillos in the quarterfinals. The unseeded Bustillos became the first Mexican player ever to reach the quarterfinals of an IRT event by defeating fourth-seeded Jason Mannino 13-11, 11-6, 9-11, 8-11, 11-4. Eagle ended Bustillos historical trip to the quarters, 8-11, 11-7, 11-0, 11-4. In the semis, Swain grounded Eagle 11-4, 11-3, 15-13.

After defeating Monchik, Locker struggled past Mike Ray in the quarters (11-4, 3-11, 11-8, 2-11, 11-5) and sixth seed Tim Doyle.
as he had throughout the week. Because I jumped on him early, it took away his confidence. Thus, he wasn’t serving as well.”

Locker admitted he was pretty excited to be in his first-ever final, but said that this May’s U.S. National Singles Championships holds his true ambition.

“I feel I’m playing well enough to be in the hunt,” he said of the upcoming national amateur championship. “I’ve never really had a good national tournament. That’s really my ultimate goal.”

For Swain, the early Monchik loss only helped his drive to a sixth pro tour championship. The Boston native increased his lead by another 232 points and now holds a 3,591 to 3,129 advantage over Monchik.

“I always want to play him (Sudsy),” Swain said of his rival. “But if he loses early, it’s good for the points too. There’s a long way to go and as long as I keep working hard, I know what the results will be.”

 Locker’s search came up empty, due in large part to Swain’s experience.

“I watched him a lot throughout the weekend,” Swain said. “He has slow, deceptive serves, so I just decided to jump all over them and not let any of them get to the back wall. Even if I left it off the back wall, at least I would get him out of the middle.

“I saw the other guys were pinching it and leaving the ball up. The other thing is I don’t think he served as well in the semis (11-7, 11-4, 8-11, 11-3). Unfortunately for Locker, the final match against Swain wouldn’t be much of a struggle.

In game one, Locker went up 1-0 on a forehand pinch for his only lead of the match. Swain jumped on each and every soft serve and repeatedly moved Locker out of mid-court.

“Actually, I thought it (the off-speed serve) would work a little more against Cliff – him being a lefthander,” Locker said following the match. “I like to throw in the Z-serve to the right side, but Cliff was all over it. Next thing I knew, there was no medium-pace serve, I had to try to find something that worked.”

At each IRT stop, local sponsors and top pros are paired for a kick-off doubles event. The group pictured at right played off in Lakewood. Super Bowl Pre-Game: Monchik vs. Swain

Up, then down. Dominant, then defenseless. However you phrase it, Sudsy Monchik has endured a tough couple of seasons. But early on Super Bowl Sunday, he narrowed the gap between himself and top-ranked Cliff Swain.

After explosive, back-to-back season tour titles (1995-96 and '96-97), Monchik suffered a setback when five-time champion Cliff Swain, at 33, regained his top ranking last season. This year, Monchik took two of the first three stops of the IRT season, then failed to even make a finals appearance until his grudge rematch victory over Swain at the Promus U.S. OPEN.

At the eighth stop on the circuit, the Ralph Schomp Automotive Pro-Am featured the unstoppable and dominant Monchik - not the one who lost to Mike Locker in the round of 16 of the previous event, held in the mile-high city just weeks earlier. This time it was Swain who appeared defenseless at the Denver Athletic Club in January.

"Lakewood in December was the first stop after Memphis and it's a big letdown," Monchik said of his five-game loss to the unseeded Locker. "I'm still learning and I let myself mentally not be ready - I wasn't focused. I played Locker and he played good. But, obviously, that shouldn't happen. He beat me and I'm looking forward to playing him next time."

Playing Suds Monchik when he has a reason to embarrass you is not a scheduling advantage. Locker should beware.

"Coming here, I really wanted to win," Monchik said. "The race between me and Cliff is probably right about deadlocked right now for the year. I think this is the sixth time Cliff and I have played each other in the finals this year - including doubles. It's been fun."

The Sunday finale between Monchik and his rival was less than entertaining for Swain, who bowed to the 24-year-old 11-6, 11-8, 11-3.

"Everything just felt lousy," Swain said following the dismantling. "I don't know why. I started off strong and just went downhill from there. I don't have a good explanation. I played hard today, but it just didn't click and he played well. I just didn't bear down... I wasn't in the right frame of mind for whatever reason."
Swain, who remains atop the IRT rankings, was on course for his second consecutive pro stop title before meeting a red-hot Monchik in the finals. He earned three-game wins over H.R. Coe, Mike Locker, Adam Karp and Jason Mannino.

Monchik erased deficits of 5-1 and 6-2 in the first two games, respectively. At 7-7 in the second stanza, Swain was overheard telling his racquet, “OK, you stink right now.” No matter what the Boston veteran tried, Monchik answered ... aggressively.

“Against Cliff, you've got to be aggressive,” Monchik said. “He's the greatest of all time. I'm shooting to be the greatest of all time. I want to be what Cliff has been throughout the game, and better. He gives me that motivation.”

The victory trimmed 43 points off of Swain's 462-point lead in the IRT standings. Monchik now trails 3,785 to 3,366.

“Yea, I'm goin' to (catch Cliff by the end of the year),” Monchik said assuringly. “It's going to be me and Cliff to the end. I'm just going to keep playing my butt off and trying hard. Hopefully, I'll win.”

“I want it (the #1 ranking) back. It's going to be me and him. I know it. He knows it. Who knows, it could come down to the last tournament of the year. It stinks (being introduced as the second-best player in the world), but I know what I want worse than anything and that's being number one. I can't wait to hear it again - 'The number one player in the world... Sudsy Monchik.'

JUST TWO GUYS FROM THE SOUTH
by Ed Remen
For nearly 20 years, Johnny Hennen and I have been competing against each other, and together as a team to collect 11 national doubles titles – and share six of them. He's from Chattanooga, Tennessee and I originally hailed from the South Bronx, New York ... but from Buffalo, to Boise, to Baltimore and many cities in between, we've traveled the country playing racquetball – the game we both love.

We've played many great teams and enjoyed the competition and camaraderie with guys from all over the country. Needless to say, we've made a lot of great friends and shared many wonderful experiences together.

But for the past five years, Johnny hasn't played racquetball. He's been fighting for his life against an opponent he couldn't see. He had vasculitis, which affected his immune system and eventually shut down his kidneys. While he was on dialysis and waiting for a kidney transplant, whether or not he'd ever play racquetball again must have seemed insignificant.

However, with the powers from above, a loving family and friends, this story enjoys a happy ending. With a successful kidney transplant two years ago, Johnny began his miraculous recovery. With hard, hard work and determination, progress was taking place.

Johnny's progress was so good, that – in a conversation a year ago – we mentioned getting back on the court and trying to play some doubles again. How sweet it would be if we could play in the 1998 U.S. National Doubles in Baltimore. It was 10 years ago since the National Doubles had been played in Baltimore and it brought back good memories to us when we won the 40+ division.

You think about the good things racquetball has brought into your life ... and how much you miss it when you can't play the game that you love so much. I wish everyone would realize just how fortunate we are to have our health and be able to play this game at whatever level.

Well, Baltimore '98 has come and gone. I've played a lot of sports in my life, a lot of games and contests. Won some and lost some. But playing side-by-side with my partner again was truly an inspiration. Knowing what he has gone through just to get there makes my aches and pains irrelevant.
Emotionally, we were fired up. When that last point was scored, we had won the 50+ division. It's hard to describe the feelings. We just hugged and cried. We knew this journey was over for now. Let's enjoy it... and we did.

Appreciate the day and stay healthy. For if we are lucky, we'll have many more journeys in our lives. Keep on stroking!

TITANIUM DOES MAKE ALL THE DIFFERENCE IN THE WORLD!

by Kevin Vicroy

Hall-of-famer Jo Kenyon thought her racquetball career was over. But the only reason she was able to get back on a court at the 1998 Ektelon National Doubles was titanium... not a racquet, but a hip.

"My (hip) problems started a year ago January," Kenyon said. "I began to feel discomfort in the hip and it gradually got worse and worse... within a year's time, I had no cartilage and it was just bone on bone."

Kenyon played three tournaments in extreme pain. "I can remember at the U.S. OPEN last year ('97), after I got through playing, I'd have to crawl on my hands and knees because I couldn't walk. It was that bad."

In May of 1998, the eight-time world seniors champion went in for a hip-replacement surgery, which included a full week in the hospital, then two weeks of outpatient care. On and off the court in Baltimore, Kenyon skittered about without a trace of a limp, and didn't appear to favor the side even slightly.

"Even after researching it (hip-replacement surgery), I thought I was going to be limited forever with this thing," she said of her new titanium hip. "It doesn't seem to be (limiting me). The only thing hurting me now is my right hip from stretching. I didn't feel a thing in my left hip that last match."

Immediately after the surgery, the 14-time U.S. national champ had been anxious to get back and swing the racquet.

According to Kenyon, "I started back hitting after that three-month check up, which was the last weekend of August. Each time I get in the court, it gets a little bit better... I figured that if I could keep up with the 35-year old guys back home, that when I got here and played in my age group it would be OK."

A bit more than "okay," Kenyon played through a five-team round robin to earn a silver medal finish in the Mixed 60+ division with partner Victor Sacco.

"I'm really excited about being back. I thought my racquetball days were over. I could live without it (the competition). The worst thing in the world was to think that I was not going to be in touch with these racquetball people. Here I am and I'm as happy as I can be."

THE GREATEST PLAYER I EVER SAW

by James Woolcock

Before this story unfolds, you should understand that I have been blessed with the opportunity to see, in person, most of the greatest professional racquetball players of all time. I did miss Charlie Brumfield in person, but have seen him play on TV. This story is not about any of those great champions, although my memories of Hogan vs. Yellen, Yellen vs. Peck, Hilecher vs. Hogan, etc. are stilled etched deeply in my memory banks. This story is about an aging, long-legged, polite man by the name of Gordon Chapman, the greatest player I ever saw.

Unless you hung around the Des Moines, Iowa downtown YMCA in the 70s, you would not know Gordon Chapman. At that time, he was in his mid-40s, and would often be found on the splendid glass courts at that facility 2-3 times per week. He was a tall, quiet man who did not stand out to any casual viewer of the action on those courts. In fact, he did not stand out for me at all for the first few months I took my fledgling game to that arena.

His regular beatings of me were initially written off as due to his being so tall. As I played him, and watched him with more interest, it became clear to me that Gordon was not playing the same game as others at that facility, including myself. I have now come to realize that Gordon had the “secret”. What is the “secret”? The “secret” is that deep understanding of how to play racquetball “the right way,” including all the inherent subtleties that make our game “chess in a box.” Charlie Brumfield had the “secret.” Steve Strandemo had the “secret.” And yes, even the great Marty Hogan had the “secret.”

I remember Gordon’s effortless stroke of the ball on both the forehand and backhand sides, with the silver frame of his Beau Mark shining off the ceiling lights. You see, Gordon’s Beau Mark was always bright silver because it never had a nick on it. It looked new every time he used it. He never wore a glove because I never remember seeing him worked up into a great sweat. He never pumped his fist, shouted “C’mon, Gordon”, or show any emotion either way. I never remember seeing him skip the ball. I do remember one piece of advice that he gave me as he came to realize that I was taking “chess in a box” seriously. He said, “I noticed that you skip a lot of balls up front in the service area. You should put these away, like a lay-up in basketball.”

Once I took my game to the tournament circuit, I remember paying special attention to the Masters-age players, to see how they compared to Gordon. It finally dawned on me at my first Midwest Regional that I hadn’t seen a single Masters’ player in any tournament that could “touch” Gordon. Of course, I just had to tell him at our next encounter. That’s when Gordon told me about the polio he had contracted in his younger years, and how it had sapped him of the stamina he now needed for tournament play. He could manage to play for a hour or so at a time, but had difficulty playing two days in a row, and more than once in one day was out of the question.

That gave me a greater appreciation for the man and I came to value him as one of the guys at the “Y”. I did get to the point of being able to beat Gordon, but I was sure it was purely youth vs. age that worked to my benefit, as my understanding of the “secret” still paled in comparison.

Gordon came back to my memory banks recently as I bested a very young, athletic player in my current racquetball league. It reminded me of some of my first encounters with Gordon and, like that time, my young opponent had no understanding of how this aging racquetball warrior could spot him 6 points, and still win. You see, like Gordon, I now have the “secret”. Thank-you, Gordon.
Increases control without sacrificing the power of 22.0" LongString Technology.

When a racquet's shape is maintained at ball impact, control is maximized. Conversely, when the racquet shape is distorted — usually by off-center hits — control is lost. The revolutionary patent-pending Control Wrap frame outperforms all other racquet designs. It prevents frame distortion and therefore increases control... without sacrificing the tremendous power generated by 22.0" LongString Technology.

Here's how control is increased:

1. Elimination of 100 string holes
   The Control Wrap frame removes 100 string holes — one entry and one exit hole at each of the 50 string contact points. This vastly decreases frame distortion while increasing frame stability and durability.

2. Exclusive Cylinder Rail™ construction
   Cylinder Rail construction also limits frame distortion, further maximizing control. This is achieved by combining a stiff graphite/titanium tube with a rigid structural support. The structural support limits racquet distortion at ball impact, while allowing the necessary straight back-and-forth racquet flex.

New String/Bumper System
Before Control Wrap, the strings penetrated the frame, turned at a sharp 90-degree angle, ran a half-inch, then re-entered at a sharp 90 degrees. The Control Wrap frame is different. It directs the strings over longer distances around the frame and into the string bed at softer angles. Local stresses on the strings are reduced. Ball responses and the player's feel for the ball are enhanced.

NEW RELEASES FROM ASHAWAY

For the first time in its 50-year history, Ashaway Racket Strings released a “racquetball-only” brochure, highlighting new racquetball strings for 1999. Included are the company’s newest releases, which offer relief to chronic string breakers: MonoKill™ and Killfire™ Pro.

MonoKill™ is a tough polyester monofilament, 17-gauge (1.20 mm) string available in 660 ft. reels (200 meters). Firmer than nylon strings, but more resilient than Kevlar®, it provides a balance of power and control that many power players find ideal. With polyester’s high tensile strength, MonoKill™ stands up longer than nylon strings. Polyester strings have long been popular in Europe, but are virtually unknown in the U.S. Because polyester is highly resistant to abrasion and “notching,” it does not require a jacket layer, making it the only true monofilament string in racquetball and tennis. The absence of an outer jacket layer makes MonoKill™ smoother and easier to string.

Killfire™ Pro is designed for top amateurs and professional athletes who are chronic string breakers. The string sets combine ultra-tough 16-gauge Kevlar® main strings with resilient, notch-resistant 16-gauge SuperKill® II nylon crosses to produce a hybrid set that has enough “pop” for power players, along with firmness for control and durability in the extreme. The braided Kevlar® also has good “bite,” for excellent ball spin. Killfire™ Pro string sets include 23 ft. (7 M) of Kevlar® mains and 20 ft. (6 M) of SuperKill® II crosses - enough for the largest oversize racquets. Both strings are a hefty 1.30 mm in diameter, Kevlar® is a registered trademark of E.I. DuPont de Nemours & Co. Inc.

ARIA S CHOSEN TO HEAD UP PROMUS U.S. OPEN WEBSITE

A diehard racquetball player for the past 26 years, Ed Arias of Madison, Wisconsin, was recently appointed to the Promus Hotel Corporation U.S. OPEN Racquetball Championships tournament committee. The 4th annual USRA event will be held November 17-21, 1999 at The Racquet Club of Memphis, Tennessee.

Arias will be in charge of developing and maintaining an increased online presence for the Promus U.S. OPEN. A Postdoctoral Fellow in the Department of Animal Health and Biomedical Sciences at the University of Wisconsin-Madison, Arias earned his doctorate in Physiology and Biophysics from the University of Illinois-Chicago in September of 1997.

"My vision for the Promus U.S. OPEN website is to present the most extravagant event in racquetball in the most extravagant way to the internet community," Arias said. "We are going to show the world what the sweetest flavor of racquetball is ... on an ‘on-demand’ basis. It will not only have audiovisual capabilities via video-conferencing and perhaps videostreaming, but also interactive areas (chatrooms) where people who could not attend can chat with various officials, pros and amateur players."

Promus U.S. OPEN tournament director Doug Ganim was pleased with the selection, saying, "We’re very excited to welcome Ed Arias to the Promus U.S. OPEN tournament committee. His expertise in the area of website design will help us grow this event into the next millennium."
HEAD NAMED TITLE SPONSOR OF JUNIOR OLYMPICS

HEAD representative Doug Ganim recently announced that HEAD would become the official title sponsor of the USRA Junior Olympic National Championships and the USRA Junior Regional Qualifier Series. The sponsorship is worth an estimated $340,000.

Also a gold-level sponsor of the International Racquetball Federation (IRF) World Seniors Championships in Albuquerque, N.M., HEAD signed a 3-year contract with the USRA.

"We really want to make a push to support grassroots racquetball and we think junior racquetball is the place for us to do it," Ganim said. "We're going to be a cash sponsor of the (Junior) Nationals and we're going to donate 15,000 extra-small and small gloves to be used in junior programs all throughout the United States." The gloves will be used to help promote junior membership and participation.

AUCTION AT STATE LEADERSHIP CONFERENCE RAISES $8,000

1998 U.S. Olympic Team apparel from the Winter Games in NAGANO, Japan, became the focus of an auction held for the "Olympic Dream" as part of the 1999 State Leadership Conference. $4,500 was raised directly from the Saturday night auction run by New Mexico State President Gary Mazaroff. Artwears donated $2,000; Internet West, $500; North Carolina, $500; and the World Seniors Racquetball Championships, $500. Industry leaders who were not present chipped in another $1,000 to bring the total to $8,000— the largest amount ever raised at the annual auction.

QUALIFIERS & CERTIFICATIONS
Regional: All players must have competed – in any division – at a recognized Regional Qualifier (Adult, Intercollegiate or Junior Regional) to be eligible to compete in the U.S. National Singles Championships. Any legitimate waivers of qualifying competition must have been approved prior to the scheduled regional weekend. Any such waivers must have been directed to – and approved by – the USRA Headquarters. Individual regional tournament directors may not approve exclusions from play, for any reason. Exception: Women age 45 and over, and Men age 55 and over (as of May 26, 1999) are not required to pre-qualify for competition.

Skill Division Certification: A, B, C, and D division entrants must:
• have competed in the same division in the regional qualifier.
• be AmPRO rated in those divisions (certified by an AmPRO instructor since January 1, 1999), or
• submit signature verification by their State Director indicating competition at the entered level since January 1, 1999 – or

NOTE: Players in Age+Skill must meet the same criteria for corresponding skill levels in “Age+A/B” & “Age+C/D” divisions.

Amateur Status: Only amateurs may participate. A professional is defined as anyone who has accepted prize money in the preceding 12 months, regardless of amount, in any IRT/WIRT sanctioned event or any other event so deemed as professional by the USRA Board of Directors.

THE PLAYERS EVENT
The “Finals” is the only national championship for singles competition in open, skill, age group and combined divisions. In addition to a full week’s worth of competition in this Level Six event, you’ll enjoy special activities all week long ...

TUESDAY
VIP and National Champions Wine and Cheese Reception — Hyatt Regency. An invitation-only reception to honor any individual who has won a National Championship within the past year.

THURSDAY
Country Western Hoedown Sponsor Party — Hyatt Regency. Ektelon, Penn and the USRA will host an authentic western party. A talent show featuring western themes, country western dancing and ‘best western dress’ contest will highlight the evening. Complimentary munchies and drinks!

FRIDAY
Casino Night — Hyatt Regency. A special night ... Las Vegas style! Each player will receive complimentary “starter” cash to begin the evening’s entertainment. At the end of the evening, lucky winners will be able to use their ‘bankrolls’ to purchase special items from golf clubs to airline tickets.

SATURDAY
USRA Annual Awards Banquet and Dance — Hyatt Regency. The Hyatt’s Grand Ballroom will host over 600 players and guests to honor outstanding performances from 1998, Hall of Fame inductees, Athletes of the Year, and other surprise award winners. Enjoy a circus theme during dinner, then take in the USRA Midway featuring magicians, fortune-tellers and games of skill and chance.

SUNDAY
Karaoke at the Back Room Bar — Hyatt Regency. Special awards and entertainment for those willing to test their singing skills!

AND ALL WEEK LONG ... MEET IN THE PARK!

Sudsy's Magic Show

I hear it all the time... "Sudsy, you're like a magician out there... your moves, your strokes, your serves, they're like magic! How do you do that? You're awesome!"

Well, there is some truth to all that... but on a more serious note, it's been the result of lots of hard work, dedication, hours and hours of drilling, having role models and coaches like Ruben Gonzales & Fran Davis and of course, some God-given talent.

Put all that together and you get ... SUDSY'S MAGIC SHOW...
Me ... a magician ... kinda hard to believe, but true! Let’s take a closer look at magic legends like Houdini and David Copperfield. When you watch one of their performances you are in total awe. Your mouth hangs open through magic trick after magic trick. And you say the same things, “How’d they do that?” “That’s amazing!” But if you take a really close look and study their moves you can see how each trick unfolds. It’s the basics — at the highest level of execution.

Well that’s me ... I “perform” the basics at the highest level of execution. Fundamentally sound, as they say, but then I began investing at the early age of seven. My parents owned a club and I pretty much lived there. Every day I’d go there after school and do nothing but hit the ball around. Then when I got older I practiced what I saw Ruben do and later I practiced what he taught me — the fundamentals. All of us, including you, have the ability to be the best, but not everyone is willing to invest. There is always a price to pay and sacrifices to make to be the best you can be.

What I’m going to share with you in “Sudsy’s Magic Show” are the very fundamentals that have helped me to earn Junior National Championships in every age group, several World titles, the ’96 and ’98 Promus U.S. Open championship titles, and be named the IRT’s #1 Player in the World (twice).

In this issue I’ll focus on... Sudsy’s Magical Power Backhand!

You might ask, “Why did Sudsy pick his backhand to analyze before his forehand?” First of all, I always like to be a little different, but more importantly, I love my backhand and the players on the tour fear it. Most club players have weaker backhands and will either run around it to hit a forehand and get out of position, or they’ll poke at the ball for a setup. So what happens? Opponents pick on their backhand with a lob serves, ceiling balls, and even hard passes — all to their backhand. Once you’re known in your club as a player with a weak backhand, you’ll be branded for life!

I want you to feel like I do about my backhand ... love it and learn to depend on it as an offensive weapon, not just for keeping the ball in play. I am a firm believer that your backhand should be better than your forehand because it’s a much more natural shot. You coil, then uncoil and release (rather than swinging across your body in the forehand). So it’s only a matter of building your confidence up so you can truly believe in your backhand. In order to help you boost your confidence level, I will simplify the most powerful, fundamentally sound backhand in the game today ... MINE... by breaking the stroke down into a five-step approach.

These five steps – or “magic tricks” – will be: The Grip, ERP (Early Racquet Preparation), The Swing, The Contact Point and the Follow-through.

TRICK #1: THE GRIP

- Take a look at my forehand grip (shaking hands with the racquet, the "v" between my thumb & forefinger is over the top part of the racquet handle).
- Take a look at my backhand grip (I have moved my hand 1/8 of a turn toward my body and now the "v" is on the “corner” of the handle). The reason I make this adjustment is so the racquet face can be flat on contact with the ball.
TRICK #2: ERP
[Early Racquet Preparation]

Upper Body
- Look at my upper body rotation — my back is facing the front wall and my right shoulder is pointing toward the side wall (coiling affect).
- Look at the height of my racquet above my shoulder.
- Non-hitting arm is up and rotated.
- Upper body erect.

Lower Body
- Look at my hip rotation — my belly button is facing the back left corner (coiling affect again).
- Knees bent.
- Feet a little wider than shoulder width apart.
- Weight distribution is relatively even, with a slight shift to the back foot.
TRICK #3: The Swing

Upper Body
• Notice my racquet head drops to below shoulder level and my back is facing the right side wall and my right shoulder is pointing toward the front wall.
• Non-hitting arm is coming through for balance.
• Upper body erect.

Lower Body
• As I step at a slight 45 degree angle the weight shifts to a more even distribution and my belly button is now facing the side wall.
• Knees still bent.
• Feet a little wider than shoulder width apart because of the step, back foot starts to pivot and back leg is at 90 degree angle.
TRICK #4: The Contact Point

Upper Body
- Shoulder continues to come through and begin opening to the front wall.
- Racquet is at full extension to body, flat and level and contact is made knee high or lower.
- Non-hitting arm is in front of the body for balance.
- Upper body erect.

Lower Body
- Hip rotation continues to come through and my belly button is now pointing to the front left corner.
- Back foot continues to pivot and back leg is still at a 90-degree angle.
TRICK #5: The Follow Through

Upper Body
- Shoulders are completely through and are facing the front wall.
- Racquet is completely through and pointing to the back wall, not up toward the ceiling.
- Non-hitting arm is completely around.
- Upper body erect and uncoiled.

Lower Body
- Hip rotation is now complete and the hips are facing the front wall.
- Back foot is completely pivoted and bears 40-50% of the weight.
- Back leg is at a 90 degree angle.
- Balanced up.
- Uncoiled and power released.

That's the fundamental magic to my backhand. The pictures slow everything down so you can see it – frame by frame – and figure out "the magic." When I fully swing with my backhand, I've been clocked at hitting over 175 mph and yes, that's using the same techniques detailed in this article. Remember, it's just the basics at the highest level of execution. Now with this new magical backhand of yours, your confidence level should rise and you can become a threat to be reckoned with from the backhand side. Hey, don't worry – the forehand is next, so you can get 'em from both sides. See ya' in the next issue!
Mental toughness is the buzzword of the 90's for athletes. What does it mean, exactly?

At a recent camp my guest instructor, sports psychologist Dr. Latell Clark, summed it up with this formula: Mental Toughness = Determination (internal) + Preparation (external). A handful of athletes in all sports are the epitome of being mentally tough, but let's take a look at some of our own...

- Sudsy Monchik. He lost in the quarterfinals of the '95 USRA Nationals in Houston then flew to the Pro Nationals the following day and won it. Ever since he's been #1 or #2 on the IRT circuit.
- Cliff Swain. He was #1 on the pro tour for five straight years, left racquetball for over a year to play pro tennis, then came back and recaptured the #1 pro-ranking in his first year back on the IRT circuit. He hasn't looked back, and has held the #1 or #2 spot on the IRT ever since.
- Robin Levine. She came back after shoulder surgery and 18 months of recovery to upset Michelle Gould in the semis of the '98 Pro Nationals, then repeated that win just a month later and went on to become the '98 USRA national champion.

With these “mentally tough” athletes as prime examples, let's take a closer look at that formula:

#1 Determination: the internal segment of the formula — Determination is...
... setting a goal(s) for yourself and not letting anything get in your way of achieving it.
... looking at things that get in your way as challenges that can and will be overcome, not as obstacles you can't conquer.
... self-commitment to achieving that goal.
... a burning desire, an inner drive inside you to make it happen. You have heart and are a fighter.
... you are creating a firmness of purpose and a fixed intention.
... you are dedicated to your goal.
... that you are willing to invest the time and are disciplined enough to do what it takes to get the job done.

#2 Preparation: the external segment of the formula — Preparing...
... physically ... both in the areas of skills/techniques and conditioning (aerobic, anaerobic, weight training, and stretching), is a must. Remember “Perfect practice makes perfect.”
... nutritionally ... is important so you don't run out of gas or become dehydrated - you want to be able to go the distance at 100%.
... a plan ... develop a plan of action not only for your match (a game plan), but also for your training schedule (including workouts).
... mentally ... pre-game psych plan, rituals, routines, visualization, focus, concentration, positive thinking and strategies.
... to have fun and enjoy yourself just for the simple pleasures racquetball provides.
... to challenge yourself to go beyond your limits.

Now you know the inner secrets of what makes Sudsy, Cliff and Robin so mentally tough. You can apply the same principles, if you want to. Just remember how mentally tough you are depends on how determined and prepared you are!
Q: & A... Q&A

My buddy and I play racquetball two times a week. We are normally pretty even, until he learned to hit a "Z" serve. I can't figure out where it's going and sometimes I can't even swing at the ball. I'm getting more and more frustrated! HELP!

A "Z" serve can seem like a trick serve until you get the hang of it. Actually, a Z serve is fairly predictable in the path it takes. The key is knowing the path!

If you ever come up against a shot that you can't figure out, try this simple strategy: find out where the ball takes its second bounce. Ok, so what does that mean?

In racquetball, you have to hit the ball before it hits the floor a second time. You can't let the ball bounce twice. If you stand in the area where the ball will take its second bounce, then you are in the right area to hit the ball.

To learn about a Z serve, go into the service box and hit a dozen of them. Watch the path the serve takes and notice where the ball strikes the floor for the second time.

As you hit the Z's, you will begin to notice a pattern. The ball almost always takes its second bounce towards the middle of the court. Whether it hits the side wall and comes out, or it hits the side wall and then rolls off the back wall, it ends up in the direction of the middle of the court.

What does that mean to you, as the receiver? The best place for you to stand to receive a Z serve is right where you already are! The middle of the court.

The reason we struggle with a Z serve is because we take a step or two towards the side wall. Then when the Z serve hits the side wall and rebounds towards the middle, we get all jammed up. There's no room to swing, so we end up pushing the ball, hitting our return into the side wall, losing power, or simply not swinging at all.

The key to returning a Z serve is two things: one, when you recognize a Z serve coming your way, turn your body so your chest is squared off to the side wall. Second, get your racquet up and your feet ready to move and step into the serve. You may have to move a few quick steps up or back, but now you are ready for whatever path the ball may take.
Customizing your Racquet

We’ve discussed at length how to “tune” your racquet through your choice of string type and tension. Let’s now look at some other accessories to customize your racquet. I got help from Jonah Bishop, owner of Racquet Sports Unlimited and Rex Lawler, owner of Lawler Court Products. Both are good friends, tournament players, and experienced stringers, and even though they often disagree, I’d trust either of them for good advice.

According to Jonah, vibration dampeners cut the amount of high-frequency vibration that is transferred from the strings, through the frame, and into your arm. This vibration, he explains, can aggravate an existing arm injury, although it’s unlikely to cause injury by itself. “Dampeners work,” he says, adding that they weigh very little, and their effect on racquet balance is negligible.

Dampeners come in two basic types: a plastic button that snaps over the strings, and a thick ribbon of fabric, rubber, gel, or some combination thereof, which is woven through the strings. Both are installed at the racquet’s throat, just above the handle. (Some players weave a regular rubber band through the strings.)

“Dampeners don’t interfere with shotmaking,” says Jonah. “If you were to hit the ball down there in the throat, you’d have blown it anyway.” He notes, however, that dampeners deaden the feel of the racquet, which can rob the player of valuable tactile feedback, because mis-hits and good shots feel much the same.

Rex, on the other hand, says the benefits of dampeners are mostly psychological. “Very little vibration goes down the string toward the throat area where the dampener is,” he says. “It radiates out at all angles into the frame, then down the frame into the handle, and then into your arm if there’s enough of it.” Rex says dampeners do change the sound of the racquet, and that many players equate this to a reduction in harmful vibration.

But Rex sees no disadvantage to dampeners, and agrees that they do reduce at least some vibration. Considering that they last almost forever, and cost just $3 or $4, I’d say there’s really no reason not to try one and form your own opinion.

Adhesive-backed lead tape can be used to customize the weight and balance of a racquet, and even slightly shift sweet spot location and shape. But, according to Jonah, re-weighting a racquet is a job only for experienced technicians. “Even most stringers are not qualified to weight and balance a racquet,” he said. “I hesitate to give players general advice on the subject, because it’s too easily misinterpreted. A lot of the changes that players seek might better be made by modifying their grip, or their stance, or their swing, than by re-weighting the racquet.”

Rex has no such compunctions. He recommends the use of Gamma Swing Weights™ to some players, and encourages them to experiment with the number and placement until they get the feel they like. Swing Weights are discreet, adhesive-backed, 3 gm. weights that are applied to the inside surface of the frame, between the strings, as compared to tape, which is cut to length and applied on the outer surface. Tape must be removed for every string job, while Swing Weights can remain in place through restringing.

Other accessories? There’s your choice of grips. Rubber, slip-on grips are a bit heavier than most wrap-on grips, but tend to last longer, and most players find them easier to keep hold of, especially if they’re wearing gloves. On the other hand, wrap-on grips are available in a wider variety of materials, textures, thicknesses, etc. The choice is strictly a matter of preference.

Wrist lacers replace the regular safety cord that comes attached to the butt of the handle. Rex feels that lacers are a little more convenient, because they stay snugged up and don’t get in the way if you have to shift your grip during a rally.

Stringers often stencil the logo of the racquet manufacturer, or perhaps the Ashaway String logo, onto the stringbed. I’m not sure that ink is an “accessory,” but the logos do look cool. We’ve found that a felt-tip pen produces a neater job than regular stencil ink, and the logo seems to hold up longer as well. Players have asked if the ink might react with the string in any way. The answer is: No. So stencil away to your heart’s content.

Ranked #1 nationally, Robin Levine is one player who believes that vibration dampeners are effective. Robin also customizes her racquet by having the Ashaway string logo inked onto the stringbed. Photo: Thomas Rankin Associates.
A World of String
by Kelly Kirk, CRT

In racquetball, technology has been in a race between composite frames and quality string. And, until recently, one would have to give the winning edge to frames judging by the frequent string breakage. But thanks to string advances (yes, that's real racquetball string, not tennis leftovers) the playing field has now been leveled. So if you've had a love/hate relationship with your racquet's consistency, shop around! There's a world of string out there!

CHOICE

If your stringer offers you two choices ... such as the $20 string job or the $25, or a color range of "white" or "red," grab your frame and run to someone who offers you better variety than that!

So the next stringer you run to offers you an onslaught of choices. Except for color, 40' coils of string in fancy packaging all look pretty much the same. How do you choose what will work for you?

COST

Most stringers divide string into four categories: durability, durability/performance, performance, and specialty. All stringers stock a base string which is usually inexpensive and durable. For sometimes as little as a $2 increase, you may graduate to the next string “up” which is often touted as a durability/performance compromise. If cost is not a deterrent, then it's the grade above - the one which leads into premium and specialty strings - that a tournament player should consider.

If you haven't investigated premium string before, try it! Performance string should both feel and play better in your racquet. Most certified racquet technicians believe that the higher end frames both deserve and warrant quality string. (By the same token, don’t put premium string into a $50 frame. It won't help.) If you're hesitant to try new products, inquire if your stringer offers a warranty - some stringers will guarantee a job for up to thirty days or offer you a discount on first-time premium strings.

Specialty strings are those which have one or more of the following characteristics: enhanced performance, more resiliency, more power, more comfort, or a quicker response. Did the phrase “more comfort” catch your attention? Tecnifibre was the first to market arm-friendly string. Tecnifibre string requires pre-stretching and is coated with a silicone lubricant to enhance durability and reduce the “sag” sometimes associated with coreless string. Most racquetball players are familiar with Tecnifibre's SOS, but if your experience with SOS was short-lived, consider Tecnifibre's 515 SPL which has considerably more wraps than SOS.

Another specialty string designed for arm problems and not used nearly enough in racquetball is Gamma's TNT RX 16 Plus. This string actually has a thin line of Zorbicon (the same gel in Gamma's shockbuster worms) running through the center to dampen string vibration. If you use this product, you will concede some power in order to have a softer, more forgiving string bed.

If your stringer is really into the trade, ask if he or she recommends a hybrid such as Gamma's TNT Bullet. Hybrids are two-piece string jobs using completely different strings. Many stringers, through trial and error, mix and match their favorite strings in an attempt to find a combination to better suit a particular customer's needs. Some of the very best hybrid combinations were simply discovered in an attempt to defray customer's cost. A coil of very expensive string for instance, may be cut in half and used only for the main strings. The stringer may then select a less expensive string for the crosses.
GAUGE

Although standards for determining string gauge (the diameter of the string) vary from company to company, one factor always remains the same: the higher the given number, the thinner the string. I once believed that – just like your racquet cannot be rated too high on the power index – neither can your string be too thin. Ashaway’s PowerKill Pro has forever changed that! It’s a 16 gauge, slightly textured string which carries a surprisingly amount of “pop” for what at first appears to be most unforgiving string bed.

TEXTURE

The pace of our game keeps creeping ever upward. As it does so, the importance of textured strings moves downward. A hexagon string, a flatter string, coatings, or lack of a coating, will affect a string’s performance. More often it is the control player, not the power player, who discerns more of a difference in regard to texture.

KEVLAR®

Aramid fiber, better known as Kevlar® is still a favorite among racquetball players who ask for nothing more than an ultra-firm string bed and durability. For those faced with chronic string breakage, you may discover that Ashaway’s Kevlar® leader Killfire XL will be easier on your pocketbook. If a Kevlar® string is your choice, make life a little easier on your elbow and ask for your string tension to be lowered a good 3-4 pounds (or 10%) to counter the stiffness associated with Kevlar®.

And there’s something new out there – polyester. Almost as stiff as Kevlar®, it resists notching (a culprit in premature breakage) and is affordable. Will it rival the Kevlar® strings out there? That remains to be seen, but Ashaway has started marketing a polyester string for racquetball called Monofire. Currently available only in 660’ reels, Monokill is attractively priced. (Because of polyester’s tendency to be so stiff, you may wish to consider using it only for the mains, not the crosses.)

COLOR

Yes, even color makes a difference. By keeping accurate records, many stringers accidentally discover the impact of dyes. So if your favorite blue string lasted less than three weeks, but the sickly yellow held out for three months, abandon loyalty to color and put the yellow in next time! For the moment, due to their construction, premium strings are often restricted to natural colors. If color is a fashion priority, you may, sadly, never graduate to premium strings.

How often should you re-string? In general, your strings lose most of their resiliency at the twenty hour mark. During the summer when tournaments are at a low ebb, you might opt not to re-string, but once the tournament season is up and running, you may discover that having a fresh racquet in your arsenal can prove to be quite rewarding.

The strings mentioned in this article are the ones I am most familiar with. Your selection is by no means limited to those mentioned. A quick look at what the pros are using turns up quite a cornucopia: Ashaway Superkill II, Babolat IRT Pro, Forten Explosion, Tecnifibre 505, and Wilson Sensation, just to name a few.

Your string choice should be determined not only by how you perceive the importance of brand loyalty, cost, texture, etc., but also by your choice of equipment and style of play. If short hops, splats, and/or mis-hits (the three negatives for string life expectancy) are considered integral to your standard game plan, it may require a few string trials before you find a brand that will measure up to your expectations in both performance and durability.

How important is a point or two to you in a big tournament?
How important is consistency?
Stay aggressive in your choice of string! Don’t neglect the guts!
I want to share with you some of the comments made by Chuck Leve, National Sales Director for the International Health, Racquet & Sportsclub Association [IHRSA], at the USRA's annual Leadership Conference this past January in Colorado Springs. I believe that Chuck has summed up our situation quite nicely and even though we might not all agree with him at times, I believe that he offers a unique insight.

By way of background, for over 16 years the USRA has simply not been involved in the club industry scene — in fact, turning our backs on that industry is largely responsible for the position we find ourselves in today. And frankly, it is amazing that our sport has survived and is still able to claim as large a player base as it does. So despite that long period of non-promotion, it remains obvious that we have a built-in feeder system that has never been exploited. Now more than ever before, we as an industry have the opportunity to change attitudes, visibility, and promote our sport in a unified way.

Recent support of the Promus U.S. OPEN, AmPRO, IHRSA, NIRSA, and other grassroots programs has definitely changed attitudes. I'm pleased to report that each and every USRA development program is now sponsored by a racquetball manufacturer, each of which have tremendous potential - in partnership with the USRA - to influence the growth of the sport. By virtue of their sponsorships, each of these manufacturers must now have a solid commitment to working closely with the USRA to maximize these opportunities.

One of our main goals has been to re-establish a bridge to the club owners. Now that we have built — and crossed — that bridge, we must develop long-range plans. With a sponsored player base of well over 6,000 players and an attractive schedule of major USRA, IRT and WIRT events to open doors, there is no reason why we can't move forward to impact the club industry immediately and positively.

I'd like to share an example which seems outlandish. Alaska's State President, Steve Arturo, recently shared his situation: A nine-court facility, with 900 members paying $125 per person/per month bring in a total income of $150,000 per court/per year. Of course this is far from the norm, but it is crucial that we convince each and every club owner that racquetball can realize this type of potential. Chuck Leve's comments go to the heart of this issue.

The idea is ... when things are good, that is the time to re-invest in the industry. That is the time to create the plan and to mobilize the people to do it. So a point in our favor is that business is good and clubs are not under the financial pressure to max out the revenue per square foot or to worry about ... "gee racquetball is down a little bit so I'd better get rid of that court." Because business is good, now is the time to re-energize and remind them [the club owners] of all the good things that racquetball brings to them.

However, there are some harsh realities we have to deal with. Harsh reality number one is that most club owners don't give a hoot about tournament players ... so how to deal with that? I'm looking at a sea of faces of those who spend the majority of their time promoting and running tournaments. You generate your memberships from those tournaments, and those memberships feed into the USRA and that's how things work. But here I am telling you that my constituency, the health club owners, don't care about tournament players, they care about everyday, recreational players. I love the tour. I ran the tour in the early years.
There is a place for it — it can be a catalyst for growth — but the average, common club owner isn’t concerned with that. So there’s work to do in promoting grassroots programs to get people into the sport. It is something that has to happen. So I hope that we — club owners, manufacturers and the USRA — can begin to kick some ideas around, do some brainstorming, set a target at some point in the future and then commit ourselves to creating plans to help us get there.

Harsh reality number two is — IHRSA has a convention every year [San Diego, March 24-27, 1999] and I will tell you that there will be more kickboxing activity in terms of visibility, sponsored activities, classes, and so forth than there will be racquetball. This will be a convention of 10,000 health club owners, managers, fitness directors, fitness club employees as well as another 2500-3000 manufacturer personnel — and there will be kickboxing classes sponsored by Kickboxing Inc., there will be BodyPump classes, YogaFit classes, PowerBoarding classes, but there won’t be any racquetball classes. That has to change. Sure, there are restrictions to holding a racquetball class when there are no courts right in the convention center, but still ... we’re in town. There will be racquetball activities and we’ll get a racquetball group together (like we did last year in Phoenix, where we had a great night of pro exhibition), but these other things aren’t going away. The kickboxers, and the body-pumps, yogafit, whatever. We have to hold our own and push forward against this barrage of whatever the next thing is ... and there is going to be the next thing. Right now you have a 1200-booth trade show occupied by 12-20 booths of racquetball and 1180 booths of everything else ... and the sole purposes of those companies is to sell their products and services to health club owners. There’s a big fight out there ... and we have to – always – fight that fight.

I’m not here to tell you what to do... but I would suggest something I think we shouldn’t do. Someone previously mentioned that tennis is also down. A few years ago when tennis was really down, the tennis people got together and put in a lot of time, effort and generated a lot of money for a “grow their game” initiative. And after several million dollars of expense and 18-24 months of effort, there wasn’t a blip on the screen. So I don’t think this is an issue that we, necessarily, need to throw money against. If someone gave our industry 1-2 million dollars, that would be wonderful, but as an industry we would have to really figure out how to spend that money. I don’t think throwing money at it is the answer. I think the ultimate answer is the people in this room [state association volunteers], the people I represent [club owners], and the manufacturers. We all have to work together with commonality to promote the sport.
There are five (5) candidates for four (4) vacancies on the USRA Board of Directors. Biographical and other candidate information appears on these two pages. For this ballot to be valid, the following is required:

- Postcard ballot must bear a legible signature, plus the mailing label from this publication, attached where indicated.
- Member must have a current competitive license membership.
- Only one ballot per member may be cast (either with a national singles entry or this postcard ballot delivered via RACQUETBALL, not both).
- No more than four (4) persons may be chosen.
- Ballot must be received by MAY 12, 1999.

Keith Calkins — Mission Viejo, CA

Racquetball has been a big part of my life for the past 30 years. I have served on the Board for the past three years and sincerely believe that the direction of the USRA is dynamic. For the past 20 years I have worked to move both the AARA and the USRA into positions so they could provide greater opportunities for their members. There will always be a will to serve the sport with professionalism and commitment. The current Board has wonderful diversity and members who have great leadership skills and a shared vision for the future. I wish to work with these people for the next three years. I currently represent the USRA on the United States Olympic Committee. The USRA receives a large portion of their funding from the USOC and the communication that is so necessary with the two is greatly enhanced if the representative serves on the Board.

I have served the USRA as treasurer for two years and currently serve on the financial committee. During our last audit it was reported that the USRA financial committee has been paramount to the organization. I would like to continue serving on this committee. I would appreciate hearing from any of our members and would enjoy sharing my thoughts about being on the Board. I take responsibilities seriously and my participation in racquetball has always been for personal satisfaction and growth as an individual.

Rosita G. Cornelius — Santa Maria, CA

As a fifteen-year player and sponsored athlete, I am excited about the opportunity to serve a sport that has brought so much to my life. Currently, in addition to working a full-time career, I am the racquetball director at the Pismo Beach Athletic Club and have served in this capacity for the past three years. I am an accomplished tournament player, sponsored by Ektelon and PowerBar and selected as Ektelon’s Player of the Year for several years in a row. I’ve served on the CARA Board of Directors for two years and am active in publicizing racquetball locally by taking the sport to local schools to promote the connection between feeling good about racquetball and feeling good about oneself.

I’m also a proponent of developing the sport at the local level, lobbying for players’ needs and participation at community levels. I feel I am a qualified candidate with energy, enthusiasm and leadership skills that could benefit the board. I am also the President of the Board of Directors for the local Boys and Girls Club as well as a member of several civic organizations. Serving on the USRA Board of Directors would be a great honor for me.
Jim Garner — Pelham, AL

In 1990 my son expressed an interest in racquetball, and this was the beginning of my serious involvement with the sport. I have served as a Junior Regional Director and am currently President of the Alabama Racquetball Association. As director of “The Rumble,” an elite camp for juniors, I have helped develop some great junior talent. The USRA Leadership conference has helped me to share common goals, problems, and opportunities with other racquetball leaders. As a player, a tournament director and a club owner, I have enjoyed promoting racquetball. I believe the experiences that I have had prepare me to contribute to the USRA as a board member.

I, like all of you, would like to see our sport prosper and would like to provide leadership to see this accomplished. I am an unabashed junior advocate. Junior participation is the future of racquetball. We have to get more juniors, women, and seniors on the courts. Racquetball has given this Dad a lot of great quality time with his son, as well as helped me to meet a great group of folks along the way. I would appreciate your consideration and vote for the USRA Board of Directors.

Shelley Ogden — Cincinnati, Ohio

I have been privileged to serve on the USRA Board of Directors for the last three years. This past year I have been elected to the position of Vice President. These past years have been a culmination of a positive and exciting 24 years involved in the sport of racquetball. I began teaching in 1975, working as a program director in 1977 and have worked and played competitively ever since. I have managed clubs, front desk service areas, run racquetball programs and instructed. I am currently program director, racquetball pro and membership director at a club of which I have been employed since 1981. My experience running tournaments and grass roots programs as well as playing competitively on a national level has enabled me to see many sides of the sport.

I have been involved in many exciting changes in racquetball in the last three years on the Board. We upgraded the national tournaments, helped the U.S. OPEN to its prestigious stage, improved the AmPRO program and brought manufacturers into the grass roots and out reach areas of programming. I am encouraged by the prospects of upcoming years in this still young sport. Yes, racquetball is surviving and moving forward every year on a professional level. I would love to continue to be a part of that decision making process in the next three years.

Geoff Peters — Chicago, IL

The USRA, and racquetball, are at a critical juncture in our history. Growth has stagnated, manufacturers are cutting back, and we have been unable to market racquetball to the masses that have bypassed us in search of “trendier” activities. To turn the corner we need to:

1. Increase exposure in the “mainstream” marketplace
2. Cross-market the “fitness” attributes of playing
3. Increase marketing and programs for juniors and female players

I’ve been involved in racquetball since being taught the game at Lake Forest College in 1973 and first competed in an organized tournament in January of 1974. I founded the Wisconsin Independent Racquetball Association (later affiliated with the USRA) and have served on Illinois State Racquetball Association Board of Directors for a total of 14 years including two years as President. In 1996 I was recognized by the USRA with the Presidential Award.

Like many of you, I never was, and never will be an Open level player. I play racquetball for the joy of the game, the exercise and the camaraderie. I’d like to serve on the USRA Board as a player’s representative who will implement our desire to promote and market a game we love.
Racquetball in Worms

German Racquetball Federation
What can you do to have the sport grow again after 20 years of racquetball in Germany? That is definitely not an easy task and the German Racquetball Federation decided very early on to focus their efforts on making the best use of the courts remaining from the U.S. Army and Air Force base closures.

Germany has the largest number of racquetball courts in Europe, but nearly 95% of them are not open to the German public. Since the German Unification in 1990 and U.S. Forces troop reductions in Europe, tournament entries have gone down, but the Army left behind very good fitness centers with wonderful courts in the best condition. After several years, we realized that many Germans who had built up friendships with U.S. soldiers still wanted to play racquetball for fun, but had no chance to play after the Army left, since the German government had no interest in the sport or in these facilities.

So, how about renting the facility - or at least the courts - for a longer time to show the sport to schools and other local organizations? That is what the German Racquetball Federation is trying to do, and our success speaks for itself. In Worms, a newly founded local racquetball organization called “Racquetball Club Worms,” just signed a contract for utilizing the courts in an old U.S. Army Base. A couple of interested Germans were brought together by the GRF and they now have the chance for some new growth.

You might not think this is very exciting, since it is just one facility, but do not forget how small the sport is over here, so every court is a big step for the future. But Worms is just one location, others might follow. Augsburg and Schwabach (both in Bavaria) are our next tasks and we are also trying to work on something in Germany’s capital of Berlin. Some ideas have been developed with an old facility in Munich. So, please wish us good luck with our efforts, we might need it.

Blumenschein joins Racquetball Canada

Racquetball Canada
Susan Blumenschein, a native from Winnipeg, Manitoba, was recently named as media relations consultant for Racquetball Canada, to help promote some of racquetball’s key events, players and the sport in general.

Blumenschein was in charge of Media Relations for the Pan Am Trials for racquetball held at the University of Winnipeg, in April of 1998. She brings to her position a Bachelor of Commerce with a marketing major and a formidable psychology background. Her work experience to date consists of Promotions/Marketing with the Winnipeg Jets Hockey Club, Media and Marketing Director for the Winnipeg Family Kite Festival, Corporate Relations Director for the Festival du Voyageur, French instructor, long-time interviewer and consultant for the Workers Compensation Board and Society for Manitobans with Disabilities.

Susan also has a strong sports background and has actively competed in a number of sports including track and field, cross-country, volleyball, tennis, handball and flag-football. She is not unfamiliar with the game of racquetball either. She is a high C racquetball player and on a really good day, aspires to move up to the B leagues.

GRF Executive Committee Elections
Submitted by Mike Mesecke
German Racquetball Federation
Members of the German Racquetball Federation met in Hamburg, at Europe’s biggest racquetball club, for their annual meeting. After a very successful year for German Racquetball with opening new courts and founding new clubs, most of the GRF Executive Committee officers were re-elected. Only Roland Christ, Vice-President since 1996, was not available.

“Roland helped us in the beginning, we have to thank him for his great support,” said Joerg Ludwig, re-elected GRF President. “He will support our goals on a new position in the future.”

New Vice-President of the GRF is Hermann Bachmaier. Christ, a racquetball enthusiast since the early 80s, will be running for the presidency of the Bavarian State Racquetball Association.

“We will support him on his possible new position. It will be good for Bavaria to have him as the President,” Ludwig said. The elections for the Bavarian State Association are dated for April 23th.

The German Racquetball Federation Executive Committee:
President: Joerg Ludwig
Vice-President: Hermann Bachmaier
General-Secretary: Mike Mesecke
Treasurer: Steffen Schroeder
Headcoach: Bjoern Jensen

Canadian Team Prospects so Bright – Coaches Need Shades!
Submitted by Susan Blumenschein
Racquetball Canada
Only the best men and women’s doubles teams were able to shine at the Canadian National Doubles Team Monitoring Event hosted by the 1999 David's Doubles Tournament. These world class athletes absolutely dazzled their coaches in early February, at the prestigious Mayfield Inn and Suites Athletic Club, in Edmonton.

Ten men's doubles and five women's doubles pairs battled for only four berths on Canada's National Racquetball Team and a chance to compete in the Tournament of the Americas, to be held in late March, in Rosarito, Baja California, Mexico. This international event is the precursor to the Pan Am Games.

Canada's brightest young racquetball stars include World Champions Lisa Kerr of White Rock, (1997 Elaine Tanner award winner), and Karina and Kris Odegard, Saskatoon's World Class brother and sister combo, who have won a combined total of eleven world championships!

Sherman Greenfeld, ten-time Canadian national champion and three-time World Champion, along with Christie Van Hees, 1998 World Champion, had the weekend off.

In Men's final action in Edmonton, outstanding veteran Mike Ceresia, of Burlington, led partner Mike Green, of Hannon, Ontario to a tie-breaking victory over Kane Waselenchuk, of Spruce Grove and Brian Istace, of Calgary (7-15), (15-10), (11-7). This was an important win for Green, who felt good about his chances to make the Canadian doubles team.

"I finally showed I belong on the team and I am here to stay. And ... Ceresia is so damned smart on the court, he makes my job easy!"

Finishing first overall in Women's round robin play were top seeded Josee GrandMaître, of Longueuil, PQ, (who coaches Canada's Junior Team in her spare time!) and Lucie Guillemette of Lac Beauport. The Quebec ensemble defeated fifth seeded Jenny Saunders, of Winnipeg, and Julie Neubauer, of Calgary (15-7, 15-10), before easily putting away third seeded Lori-Jane Powell, of Saskatoon, and Chantal Turgeon, of Rock Forest, PQ, (15-5, 15-3). Powell and Turgeon saved face later by defeating Saunders and Neubauer (15-14, 15-9).

Second place overall went to fourth seeded Saskatoon hopefuls, Karina Odegard and Amanda MacDonald, who really pulled the tablecloth from under Canadian team veterans, Debbie Ward, of Prince George, AB and Lisa Kerr, of White Rock, BC, (seven time World Junior Champion) in a hair wrenching tie-breaker (15-8, 14-15, 11-10). Ward and Kerr graciously accepted third place.

Now that tournament results are in, the really big question is ... how in the world are coaches Ron Brown and Carol Mulholland going to choose four Canadians from all this pool of talent? No disrespect intended ... but I would not want to be coach for all the Vuarnet shades in the world!

Site Announced for Japan Open '99

The Sporting World Levene Choufu will host the 99 Japan Open May 1 to 5th in Choufu city. The club is located near Choufu station, 25 minutes by train from Shinjuku, Tokyo. They have five racquetball courts with glass walls. Two or three other clubs around Tokyo area will be named to sub-host the event. Japan Racquetball Association will announce more details on February 15th.

Members of Canada's National Racquetball Team and other athletes hoping to be named to the Team were in Halifax, NS to compete in the National Team Singles Monitoring Tournament sponsored by A.A. Munro Insurance of Antigonish, Nova Scotia. Competitors included current World Champions Christie Van Hees and Sherman Greenfeld, plus recently crowned Junior World Champions Lisa Kerr (Girls 18 & under) and Karina Odegard (Girls 16 & under).

In the women's division, top seed Christie Van Hees of British Columbia, current National and World champion, defeated #3 seed, Lori-Jane Powell of Saskatchewan (15-9, 15-10).

In the men's division, second seeded Mike Ceresia of Ontario upset current National and World champion, Sherman Greenfeld of Manitoba in a tiebreaker (14-15, 15-4, 11-6).

Final Results – Men's Open:

1st & 2nd Place: Mike Ceresia (ON) def Sherman Greenfeld (MB) 14-15, 15-4, 11-6. 3rd
4th Place: Michael Green (ON) def Brian Istace (AB) injury default. Women's Open: 1st & 2nd Place: Christie Van Hees (BC) def Lori Jan Powell (SK) 15-9, 15-10. 3rd & 4th Place: Josee GrandMaître (PQ) def Lucie Guillemette (PQ) 8-15, 15-4, 11-7

European Championships in Germany

German Racquetball Federation

The European Racquetball Federation (ERF) recently selected Germany to once again host the European Championships in 1999. The German Racquetball Federation chose the city of Bad Tolz (Federal State of Bavaria) and its local racquetball club as the host site for this event, which will be held July 20-25, 1999. During these five days, actually two European events will take place: The 10th European Championships (Individual and Team event) and the 7th European Masters (Seniors Individual and Team event). WCB/McGraw Hill’s Winning Edge Series in Racquetball

This straightforward introductory book on racquetball will help you develop the skills and learn the rules required for playing the game. You’ll discover tips on picking equipment, warm-up exercises, nutritional tips, and detailed descriptions of basic shots, serves, and strategies. Professional studio photographs demonstrate proper form, and the line drawings clearly mark sections of the racquetball court described in the text. Reading Racquetball will give you the winning edge on and off the court.

Perfect for use as an instructional text, chapters cover: History & Trends, Equipment, Rules, Safety & Etiquette, Warming-Up, Strokes, Serve, Basics, Backwall Play, Strategy, Doubles, Nutrition, Conditioning, Mental Training and Drills, plus complete appendices and ancillaries. Get your copy today – for only $15.00 – by calling the USRA @ 719-635-5396.

In this game, if you're not quick, you're dead. And for two-time Pro World Champion Sudsy Monchik, killer quickness starts from the ground up with the high-torque traction of Head Sonic 500 Mid court shoe. Gum rubber outsoles, superior fit, lightweight materials, and performance styling that proves once and for all that a high-performance shoe can look good and kick butt.

Also available: Sonic 500 Low (shown above) and for ladies, the Sonic 400.
