ANTI OPPONENT WEAPON

THE TITANIUM POWER REVOLUTION CONTINUES...
Arm yourself with the power to play...and win. Introducing HEAD's Ti. Power Series Racquets and the AnTi.Torsion System.

You can bet a player of Sudsy Monchik's caliber wouldn't be caught dead using a racquet that didn't have the ultimate in power and control. That's why Sudsy chooses HEAD's new Ti. Power Series Racquets with the AnTi.Torsion System. This innovative system stiffens the entire throat area and fuses more rigidity in the frame — all without reducing the length of the main strings or the size of the string bed. The result is unprecedented power even on off-center shots. And our PowerZone System allows the strings to move more freely by expanding the string bed by eight square inches, providing maximum power with every hit. HEAD's Ti. Power Series is constructed with the perfect blend of titanium for strength and graphite for lightness. Experience the most powerful racquets ever made.

Now, the only thing deadly about Sudsy...is his game.
With only four months to go, I'd like to jump right in with both feet to become one of the many millions of people who will reflect on the past — while looking toward our future — as the millennium approach-eth. Well, there might not be quite so much of that on the subject of racquetball, but I wanted to get my two cents in early anyway.

So, as much as we talk about racquetball being a "community," shouldn't we face facts? If it were truly one big, happy family, there wouldn't be quite so many distant cousins, twice-removed, wandering around without any feel for their "roots." You know, players who don't even know that there is any organized structure for the sport they enjoy? Don't know their "Gee-neology?" [Gee, there's a national office? Gee, and a state association? I can buy an official rulebook? A magazine? Attend major tournaments? Gee!] If we accept the most-conservative data, which sets the number of regular racquetball enthusiasts at roughly nine million, we're left with about 8,975,000 long-lost relatives wandering around looking for the picnic. How do we invite them?

At the beginning of the summer, our thought was to have those of you "in the know" spread the word through a membership drive [see page 5]. Our office was practically faint at the prospect of just doubling our membership base (leaving 8,950,000 still at large). We offered some incentives to bring in new members (balls for everyone!), and prize drawings (there's plenty left ... ) then waited to watch our numbers grow. Let's just say that we are all still fully-conscious.

The point? The membership drive is entering its last phase and our little community remains just that. Where are all our league, shuttle, mixer, pick-up game and once-a-week-at-six-am brethren? Reaching them one-on-one is effective, but slow. Entire league sign-ups are quicker. You, or your club's league director, can make multiple copies of the form on page 5 and use them to claim a can of balls for each new member you sign up. Quick, easy, and you could end up with a case-ful to yourself!

So, I reflect on the time when racquetball was a much larger community. And I hold out hope for a bright future in which the USRA will provide services to ... oh, let's say one percent (yes, 1%) of the estimated playing population. By my count, that would be a whopping 90,000! You know, I may faint ...

Thanks for the Memories!

I'm sitting in my room thinking of the last ten years and how fast they have gone. I'm thinking of all the great players I have coached and what an honor it has been to work with the greatest people and athletes in our short history of racquetball. The list of players reads like a who's who of our sport ... and each and every one of them has touched my heart and inspired me. It's too bad our racquetball public cannot get to know you and see you all battle it out for our country. Few get to see the effort they have put in — time and time again — in tournaments that hold no true financial reward, but just to represent our country.

To our opponents, who I respect greatly and would love a chance to coach, I thank you. Outstanding Canadian athletes over the years, the entire Mexican team, team Bolivia, team Chile, team Germany, Ireland, Australia, Japan, and Korea, I thank you. Your excellence has given us the incentive to train harder.

To Fran Davis, with whom I started coaching, I owe much. She has been a good friend, coworker, student and teacher. To Tom Travers, who has been an excellent assistant coach, I thank you for your dedication and your sense of humor. To Diana McNab, whose dedication and techniques helped to shape our team, thanks. To Scott Phelps, who helped change our great game and the way players condition for it; thanks. To Laura Finch, who picked up the ball after Diana, thanks. To the many team leaders and managers that I tortured relentlessly over the years and, most of whom, rose to the occasion when crunch time came ... thanks!

Finally, to my son, Colin, and my wife, Ann, thanks for putting up with the 20 day "disappearing acts" that were demanded every year. I am proud of our record. Our team has compiled a record of 21-0 over the last nine years. I am proud that many of our team members now want to coach and pass on their expertise to so many others. I am proud to be associated with so many men and women who want to give back to our great sport.

Here in Winnipeg, we are underdogs for the first-time ever in an international competition. Canadian world champions Sherman Greenfeld and Christie Van Hees hold winning records against the players we are sending up against them. On paper it looks bad. Marv Levy, the great former coach of the Buffalo Bills, had a saying before every game; "Where would you rather be than right here, right now?" That's exactly how I feel before the opening ceremonies tonight. We're going to do a fantastic job. Our players have always risen to the occasion. We are going to win this. Thanks for everything.

Postscript: This "farewell" piece was written on the evening before we started the Pan Am Games which are now history. We succeeded again. Michael Bronfeld rose to the early task of defeating Sherman and Cheryl Gudinas defeated Van Hees for the gold. The doubles teams of Doug Ganim and Drew Kachtik and Jackie Paraiso and Joy Mackenzie were dominant. Adam Karp defeated Michael for the gold once again and Laura Fenton took a bronze. The game isn't played on paper, it's played on the court. The heart of a player cannot be measured on paper. Perhaps that is the greatest thing about my experience with the U.S. Racquetball Team. I have always had faith in them, and thus they have returned that confidence in our staff. To all of you; I am humbled to have worked with you. See you all on the tournament trail!

Missing in Action

The reason for my email is sort of interesting. I’m looking for an old racquet. Remember the DP 8000? That is the frame I used when I was playing the tour...that’s scary to admit.

Anyway, my wife Lauren put together a very nice, framed collage of my racquetball memorabilia (RB covers, pics, logo’d shirts, etc), and it has a space in the frame for a racquet. There’s my problem. I don’t have any old DP 8000’s. It’s funny, when I was playing the tour, I had 50 of them. Now, I need one and don’t have any.

Is there any way to put out an “all points” bulletin in the magazine to see if someone has one they would be willing to give up? There’s probably a free pair of Converse shoes in it for someone who can help me out! Thanks in advance for any assistance you can give me.

Library Carded

Over a year ago I inquired in the main library in Cincinnati about getting a [RACQUETBALL] subscription. It took forever, but when it was on the shelf I was sooo happy. I was then curious and asked the librarian to do a search to find out how many libraries (in the whole USA) carried proof that racquetball is alive via [RACQUETBALL] magazine! To my surprise there were only 14. That is 14 — like Pete Rose’s number? 14? Yes, 14. Well, I just about grew six frown wrinkles immediately. How can there only be so few in the nation? If this is true, that is one good reason why kids do not know about our great sport! If 14 is accurate, then I ask all racquetball players to rush to their neighborhood libraries and demand a subscription to the publication that covers the greatest sport of all time!

On the Hunt

Does anyone at the magazine remember a racquetball “trainer” called Jokari? It is a small (6”x5”x4”?) red, heavy baseball with a long, stretchy cord attached to a real racquetball. It does a great job replicating 3-wall racquetball (4-wall if you’re strong enough!). I bought mine in Homestead, Florida in 1978. I’ve called all the local sporting stores but no luck. Any ideas?

"MATURE" NATIONAL SINGLES ENTRANTS!

Effective in 2000, the USRA Board of Directors has re-established its former policy regarding regional qualifying for National Singles competition — for all entrants! ALL players, of any age, must pre-qualify for competition in Houston by competing in a designated regional qualifier. However, the Board also recognized two additional senior/master events at which formerly-exempted players can qualify for national competition.

The Women's Senior/Master Championship in Baltimore, Md. [Jan. 21-23] and the NMRA Masters Singles Championships in Fountain Valley, Calif. [Feb. 16-19] will both be considered "regional events" for the purpose of qualifying their 45-and-over participants for competition in the 2000 National Singles in Houston [May 26-31]. Please note that all 35+ and 40+ players must still qualify through a regularly scheduled regional event, and that all other stipulations remain in force — you must compete in (not merely enter) the qualifying event, age requirements, etc.

"JUNIORS" LISTEN UP, TOO!

Also effective in the new year, former junior regional qualifying requirements have been lifted — and replaced with the stipulation that Junior entrants must first compete in a recognized Level 3 State Championship in order to qualify for the 2000 event. Although there are no longer separate regional qualifying tournaments for juniors, all other stipulations remain in force — you must compete in (not merely enter) the qualifying state event, age requirements, etc.

For juniors, two events serve as qualifiers for the U.S. Junior National Team in 2000. The National High School champions (1 each, male & female = 2) will be appointed to the team for a term of one year, along with the top three finishers at the Junior Olympic Championships in the 18-, 16- and 14- divisions (3 each, male & female, from each division = 18). Like its adult counterpart, the 20-member U.S. Junior Team competes internationally and conducts annual goodwill tours. [policy revised, effective 01/2000]

2000 IHRSA PROGRAMMING AWARD

Does your club have a great program director who keeps your courts full and players motivated? If so, you need to nominate that individual for IHRSA's annual Racquetball Programming Award! The award recognizes excellence in programming and promoting racquetball in the club environment. Winners and finalists receive a complimentary registration to IHRSA's 2000 Convention in San Francisco, where they will be honored at the award presentation; be invited to a special Racquetball Reception and have the opportunity to appear in CBI and RACQUETBALL magazines. For an application, contact Heather Fender at 719/635-5396, ext. 120 or visit the IHRSA website at www.ihrsa.org/awards. Application Deadline: November 5!

U.S. TEAM STAFF

The USRA is accepting applications for Assistant Coach and Team Leader positions in the 2000-2001 season. Applicants for assistant coach positions should hold applicable certifications in AmPRO instruction, Level One coaching and stringing. Team Leader applicants should also be Referee certified at Level Two, plus be familiar with U.S. Team policies and procedures. Resumes must be submitted to the USRA office [Attn: Jim Hiser], no later than October 30, 1999.

U.S. JUNIOR TEAM STAFF

The USRA is accepting applications for Head Coach, Assistant Coach and Team Leader positions in support of the U.S. Junior Team for the 2000-2002 season. Head and Assistant coach applicants should hold applicable certifications in AmPRO instruction and Level One coaching. Team leader should have a working knowledge of U.S. Junior Team policies and procedures. Resumes must be submitted to the USRA office [Attn: Jim Hiser], no later than June 1, 2000.

SPONSORSHIP OPPORTUNITIES

The USRA is currently seeking sponsors from outside the industry to support its major events through sponsorship packages which range from $2,500 - $100,000. A wide variety of benefits are available to the potential sponsor — who may choose from among five domestic events per year: National Doubles, National Singles, Junior Olympics, National High Schools, U.S. OPEN or three IRF events: World Intercollegiates, World Seniors, World Junior Championships. Please contact Jim Hiser at 719-635-5396, ext. 130 to receive complete details on the USRA's sponsorship program.

BOARD NOMINEES SOUGHT

Three persons will be elected to the USRA Board of Directors in May of 2000. Interested candidates can get on the ballot in two ways: by committee nomination (contact committee chair Ron Maggard at 816/229-1300 or via email to: RMSales2@aol.com) or by petition (with the signatures of 100 licensed USRA members). To obtain petition forms, write the USRA at 1685 West Uintah, Colorado Springs, CO 80904-2906. Signatures must be obtained between October 1 and December 15, 1998 — with completed forms submitted to the national office no later than December 30 for verification. The term of office is three years and includes the commitment to attend two annual meetings (in the spring and fall), serve responsibly and take a leadership role on committees.

From day one, everyone knew racquetball would be one of the hottest sports at this summer’s Pan American Games in Winnipeg, Manitoba, Canada. Unusually high 90-degree temperatures for the region made the situation more literal, and even ticket sales were heated, as racquetball’s gold and bronze-medal matches sold out early, and seats to the semifinal matches quickly melted away. And before the first match was ever played, Winnipeg’s own Sherman Greenfeld was selected to deliver the athletes’ oath at Opening Ceremonies. That singular honor stirred up the press corps and hoards of cheering countrymen in Winnipeg Stadium, many of whom echoed those patriotic sentiments all the way through the final day of competition at the Winnipeg Winter Club.

Local Talent
Although many of the matches in preliminary round-robin play (for seeding) proved to be anxiety-ridden, Puerto Rico’s Rob Dejesus did the most damage to Team Canada’s medal plans right out of the box when he upset its national champion, Kane Waselenchuk on opening day. The single loss in the round resulted in Waselenchuk being bumped into the lower half of the playoff bracket, where he would be forced to meet teammate Greenfeld in the quarterfinals. Immediately, the Canadian fans loyalties were split.

In that later match-up, Greenfeld had the hometown advantage with a standing-room-only crowd at the Winnipeg Winter Club — the majority of which were obviously on hand to cheer their “prince” in a rematch of the Canadian National Championship final. Greenfeld, who had hinted all week that the Pan Am Games would be his final tournament before retiring, had no intention of being knocked out of such a major event in his own backyard so quickly. After losing the first game to his Edmonton rival, he rallied back to down seventeen-year-old Waselenchuk in the tiebreaker, drawing support from the boisterous crowd chanting his name in unison, and motivation from local media surrounding the court.

Grudge Matches
Greenfeld’s semifinal against the USA’s Michael Bronfeld didn’t get any easier for the veteran. Bronfeld was eager to meet the nemesis who had beaten him repeatedly in previous international tests. After learning he would meet Greenfeld in the semifinals, Bronfeld remarked, “I’m glad Sherman beat Kane. I want to beat him, and I want to beat him in his hometown. It’s my turn now.”

With his father Ed on the sidelines, Bronfeld lived up to those fighting words. He was also backed by a small, but loud, group of USA athletes — including team staffers Marc Auerbach and Kelley Beane — who did a respectable job of being heard over the hometown crowd. Bronfeld easily took the first game, 15-6, before Greenfeld put up a fight and rallied to take the second game, 15-12. Bronfeld put his words back into action in the tiebreaker with an 11-5 victory, which knocked Winnipeg’s charmer into the bronze medal match.

ReMatch

In a high-flying battle between the USA's 'Flying Fish' Adam Karp and the U.S. Air Force's Rob Dejesus, Karp advanced to the gold-medal round with a 15-4, 15-12 win, to set up a rematch of the U.S. National Singles Championship final. After taking the silver medal at the 1995 Pan Am Games and both the '98 and '99 U.S. National Singles Championships, Bronfeld was confident prior to the gold-medal match,

"I'm tired of silver. I'm ready for gold." But, the 1999 Pan Am Games would not prove to be golden for the Pacific Grove, Calif. resident, as he fell to Karp, 15-9, 15-12. "I played good all week, but I didn't play very well today," said Bronfeld. "I had opportunity after opportunity, but I didn't produce. I was really disappointed by that. I would like a gold, but I'll take a silver."

In the bronze-medal match, Greenfeld met Dejesus in the world champion's final grasp at a medal in front of friends and neighbors. Despite pushing it to a tiebreaker, Greenfeld could not match Dejesus, and the Arizona resident, who plays for Puerto Rico, captured the bronze. Following the match, Greenfeld took the referee's microphone to make a speech confirming his retirement to the mass of fans in the stands. "Nothing beats what I had here this week," he commented. "I wish I could have won the gold for you all today, but just having you all here to watch me play after twenty years in this sport is something I'll never forget."

Marathoner

The women's competition was not without its own surprises. Chile's Angela Grisar proved to be the hardest working player of the Games, by advancing the furthest, not only in singles, but also in doubles. Grisar heated up the women's singles competition with her upset over Canada's Josée Grand'Maitre, 8-15, 15-3, 11-8, in the quarterfinals, erasing any hope of an all-Canada final. But in the semifinals, Grisar's string of luck ended when she met the USA team in both singles and doubles. At 11:30 a.m., Grisar and partner Loreto Barriga took the court against U.S. twins Jackie Paraiso and Joy MacKenzie. After that 15-3, 15-12 loss, Grisar had only a few hours to rest before her 4:30 p.m. match against the USA's top singles player, Cheryl Gudinas. A tired Grisar fell once again to a powerful USA opponent, 15-6, 15-11, moving her into both the women's singles and doubles bronze-medal matches.

The USA's Laura Fenton met Canada's world champion, Christie Van Hees, hoping to advance to the gold-medal round, where she could avenge her loss to Gudinas in the finals at the U.S. National Singles Championship. However, the power of the young Van Hees was too much for the 37-year-old Fenton, who had problems adjusting to the extreme Winnipeg heat and humidity. Despite her 10-year-old daughter Jennifer waving an American flag and cheering her on from the stands, Fenton fell to Van Hees, 15-9, 15-6.

An openly disappointed Fenton dropped into the bronze-medal round, but tried to be upbeat despite her disappointment. "The biggest thing is that I feel I am the luckiest person here considering my age, stage of life and where I came from," Fenton remarked. "Most meaningful to me was having my daughter here to see her mom playing."

Fenton's daughter did get to see her mom on the podium stand. Although it wasn't accepting the gold, as she had hoped, Fenton defeated Grisar, 15-5, 15-8, to take the bronze medal. Grisar didn't walk away from the Pan Am Games empty handed either. Only an hour before meeting Fenton in the women's singles bronze-medal match, Grisar and Barriga captured Chile's first racquetball medal by knocking off the pair from Bolivia, 15-4, 13-15, 11-2, to grab the women's doubles bronze.

Cheryl Gudinas doesn't want any more silver medals. After years of finishing second to Michelle Gould, Gudinas finally earned her first U.S. National Singles Championship title in May, then proved that it wasn't just a fluke with a second gold-medal performance at the 1999 Pan American Games.

Throughout most of her career, gold has been elusive for Gudinas ... she earned silver at the 1995 Pan American Games, '96 World Championships, '99 Tournament of the Americas and '99 Pan Am Trials. Going into this year's Nationals, she had already listed two second-place finishes from that event on her bio. This year she was out for the gold and got it, beating fellow Pan Am-qualifier Laura Fenton in the final.

Winning the national title put Gudinas in the top-spot at the Pan Am Games, where she was determined to settle for nothing less than a follow-up gold. But a tough field of players crossed her path to the tall platform, including Canadian world champion, Christie Van Hees.

The much-anticipated match between Van Hees and Gudinas finally materialized in the gold-medal round at the Pan Am Games. After winning the first game, Gudinas couldn't produce in the second game, resulting in a tiebreaker.

"In the second game, (Van Hees) was playing great and I wasn't putting the ball down the line," said Gudinas, who gave up a two-point lead in the second game. "I had some poor shot selections, and she was killing the ball. My serve finally started coming around, and I hoped I could put her away in a tiebreaker."

After Gudinas went up 7-3 in the tiebreaker, Van Hees rallied back to take control and bring herself to match point at 10-8. Then, serving for the gold medal, Van Hees drove in a short serve to give Gudinas an opportunity to bounce back. But a quick side out gave the serve back to the Canadian without Gudinas gaining any points. Once again Van Hees served for the gold.

"I couldn't help thinking it was over," Gudinas said. "I had all this stuff going through my head like 'you can't win them all' or 'if I don't win, it's not the end of the world.' Finally I asked myself 'why shouldn't I win?'"

During this contemplation, fate smiled on Cheryl. In the heat of the moment, Van Hees neglected to check her receiver, whose racquet had been raised above her head, signalling 'not ready.' Van Hees had already received one warning on the infraction, so it was side out once again.

"When I got my serve back for having my racquet up, I thought 'what are the chances that I can get three points in a row?' But she did. The obviously-shaken Van Hees fell victim to two consecutive backhands down the line to tie the score at 10-10. Gudinas then drove a forehand cross-court pass just out of the frustrated Van Hees' reach for the win and the gold medal.

"I finally got my gold, just like at nationals," an ecstatic Gudinas boasted after her gold-medal match. "I've always finished second. I knew this was my tournament for the taking, just like I felt after beating Jackie (Paraiso) in the semifinals at nationals.

"For so many years I finished behind Michelle Gould. All I could think about was 'Michelle's not playing anymore. I have no excuse for not winning. I wasn't going to let this opportunity slip away.'"

Longest mainstrings in racquetball create the most powerful racquets ever made.

Patent-pending 22.0" LongString technology extends mainstrings through the entire length of the handle, creating center mains at least 6" longer than in competitor racquets. The ten center mains add at least 55 extra inches of combined length — an increase of at least 38% for power like you've never seen.

The evolution of racquet frames... from teardrop to quadraform to midsize and oversize... resulted in longer mainstrings and racquet faces. This created tremendous increases in power. Why? It's the same principle as the bow and arrow. For an equal amount of effort, longer mainstrings and racquet face cause the strings to stretch further, allowing the frame to store more energy. The result is a string/frame system which provides a more powerful shot when the energy is released.

An obviously tired Grisar was happy with her bronze-medal performance in the women’s doubles competition, but admits that playing both singles and doubles had an impact on her play. “I think more than being physically tired, I was mentally exhausted,” she said after losing to Fenton. “I was really nervous for the doubles match. After I got the medal, I relaxed. I couldn’t focus on what I needed to do in the singles match.”

One Last Time

After the women’s singles and doubles bronze medals were decided, play moved into the gold-medal rounds, where the matches heated up even more. In women’s doubles, twin-sisters Paraiso and MacKenzie meet Canada’s Lori-Jane Powell and Deborah Ward in the twins final match as doubles partners. Prior to the start of the Pan Am Games, MacKenzie announced that she would be retiring from the sport following the Games to spend more time with her family. The undefeated duo took the court determined to end their career together with another gold medal and handed Powell and Ward a 15-6, 15-2 loss and the silver. Ward conceded the skills of their victors. “They just attacked consistently and kept the pressure on. They are an awesome team. They know each other inside and out. You can’t find two players who play like them.”

The sisters were pleased with their gold medals, but admit it comes with a bit of sadness. “It’s rewarding to win with Joy again and be able to have her last match be a successful, victorious one. It’s sad at the same time, because I have to find a new partner,” commented Paraiso, who will pair up with Pan Am-teammate Fenton for the upcoming doubles season. “No one will fill the shoes that she filled. No one will match up with me like her.”

MacKenzie took time to reflect on her career after winning her final gold medal. “This gold medal is something I’ll remember for a long time. It will hold a lot of memories of good people and good friends that I’ve made along the way,” she commented. “I’m glad I had the opportunity to play with Jackie as long as I have. It’s been a good ride.”

Crowded House

The men’s doubles final was yet another match up between the USA and host-country Canada. The USA doubles team of Doug Ganim and Drew Kachtik met Canada’s Roger Harripersad and Kelly Kerr for the gold medal. Prior to the match, many questioned how Ganim would perform after injuring his elbow earlier in the week and undergoing aggressive therapy to enable him to play at all. But there was no more questioning after the pair took the court. The duo from the USA played their best game of the week, literally knocking off Harripersad and Kerr for the gold, 15-6, 15-5.

“We complemented each other excellent, we covered each other well, and we were both making our shots,” an enthused Kachtik remarked following the match. “We were just an excellent combination today. That’s really the best feeling — playing that good together.”

The Canadian duo was devastated. “I feel horrible. Second is second. I came here to win gold. I have enough silver medals,” a disappointed Harripersad commented. “Our game plan hinged on them playing the way they played all week. We didn’t expect them to be able to kill so successfully. Their reflexes were great.”

Close Call
While women’s doubles had the most sentimental final, women’s singles had the most exciting one. Gudinas met world champion Van Hees in the gold-medal match, which proved to be a true nail-biter. After taking the first game, 15-13, Gudinas let the second game slip away, losing it 9-15. In the surprising tiebreaker, the 1995 Pan Am Games silver medallist took a 7-3 lead before Van Hees rallied back with her dominating drive serve to turn the tide. Van Hees battled back to a 10-8 advantage, and was serving for the gold, but faulted with a short serve to give Gudinas a brief, but unrealized, chance to come back. Another side out put Van Hees back on serve for the gold, where she made a second costly error and neglected to check her receiver, who had held her racquet above her head to signal “not ready” as the drive to the left side was launched. Since Van Hees had already received a referee’s warning for the infraction, the result was another side-out. This time Gudinas capitalized by tying the score at 10-10 with two consecutive backhands down the line. She then drove a forehand cross-court pass just out of the frustrated Van Hees’ reach for the win. [See sidebar, page 11]

An obviously distraught Van Hees receded into the confines of the Winnipeg Winter Club locker room to collect her thoughts before facing the waiting media and fans following the match. “It is hard losing 11-10, but I have no regrets,” she admitted. “My whole heart was in the match. My only consolation is the World Championships, and no one can take that away from me.”

At the award ceremonies, the stars and stripes were hoisted again and again, as the USA accepted four gold, one silver and one bronze medal. Canada earned the second highest tally, with three silver, while Mexico, Puerto Rico and Chile each earned a bronze.

Although the USA dominated the medal platform once again at the Pan Am Games, thanks to the decade-long efforts of now-retired U.S. Team Coach Jim Winterton, everyone admits the level of international competition is on the rise. In his new role as Head Coach, Tom Travers and future U.S. squads will have their hands full in coming years from their Pan American competitors.

True Sweep for U.S. Team
In 1995, the sport of racquetball debuted at the Pan American Games as a medal event. The USA sent a full team to Argentina and completely dominated the Games, capturing the top-three finishes in both men’s and women’s singles, the gold medal in the men’s and women’s doubles, and the gold medals for men’s and women’s teams, plus the overall team win.

This year, while the USA team hoped for another good showing, everyone was aware that the competition from fellow-Pan Am countries had greatly increased. Canada’s team boasted the men’s and women’s world champions. Puerto Rico’s team was lead by the current U.S. 25+ national singles champion. And many of the South American countries had been training with U.S. coaches and athletes, including Chile, who had enlisted former-U.S. National Team member Mike Guidry as its head coach.

However, the much-improved competition did not stop the USA team, as it swept the gold medals once again. All told, the USA won four gold, one silver and one bronze medal, and was the only team to have every one of its members leave Winnipeg wearing a medal.

“Our team is awesome. If we play well every match, we’re going to win,” men’s singles medalist Michael Bronfeld had predicted. “I’ve been on some really good teams, but this is one of the better ones.”

"Rulings preventing such a "podium sweep" by a single country saw fourth place finishers awarded bronze medals at the '95 Pan Am, but in fact Robin Levine and Derek Robinson won their respective third place matches over Canada’s Josee Grandmaître and Sherman Greenfeld. The “platform” issue was addressed by the roster reduction of singles players from three per country to two in 1999."
The Arizona State University in Tempe, Arizona hosted the HEAD 26th USRA Junior Olympics this past June, where just under 300 summer-vacationers converged to test their skills against the best juniors athletes in the country. In addition, players in the 14’s, 16’s, and 18’s were shooting for spots on the U.S. Junior National Team. Temperatures reached 106 degrees, and competition was just as hot inside.

Several activities were planned throughout the week, but one of the highlights had to be the exhibition between top tour players Sudsy Monchik and Adam Karp, organized by Doug Ganim and HEAD. The crowd was packed in to watch the show put on by the current amateur and pro national champions, with incredible dives and shots. The highlight had to be the five-dive rally that ended on a no-look rollout by Sudsy.

“We are thrilled to support junior racquetball as the title sponsor of the Junior Olympics. It is great to see such strong activity, especially in younger age brackets,” said Ganim. “These players are the future of the sport and we are going to aggressively promote junior racquetball.”

Coaches Impressed
And what do the coaches think of this year’s junior talent? Eric Muller, U.S. Junior National Team Coach, felt that the boy’s 18’s was the strongest division he had seen in a long time. “There are five guys that have a legitimate chance to win: Tucker, Vanderson, Ford, Garner, and Gehling. There is a lot of talent in the field.”

Tucker Takes the 18’s Undefeated
The 18’s played out to find the top two seeds in the finals, Josh Tucker and Shane Vanderson. Tucker, although struggling at the Intercollegiates and losing to Huczek in Houston, was still confident and focused. "I've been going to St. Louis to play the Open players there to prepare for this.”

Vanderson easily won the first game but ran into some trouble in game two. Williams surprised Vanderson with some great gets and shots, then took the second game, but Vanderson wasn’t about to let this match slip away. Vanderson jumped out to a quick 6-0 lead, before Williams began to generate a lot of side outs and looked as though he would come back. Williams could not capitalize on any of the side outs and this allowed Vanderson to move on with an 11-0 win.

Tucker Takes the 18’s Undefeated
The 18’s played out to find the top two seeds in the finals, Josh Tucker and Shane Vanderson. Tucker, although struggling at the Intercollegiates and losing to Huczek in Houston, was still confident and focused. Having never won a Junior Nationals, plus this being his last year as a junior, he truly wanted to win. “I was happy with the loss, but I was excited about his first appointment to the Junior National Team. Vanderson, on the other hand, ran into a little trouble in the semis against another first time Junior Team member, Mitch Williams. Williams, very excited about making the National Team, was confident entering the match.

“Shane has got the better of me every game but we have played a 3-0 against him, but it would be nice to win today.”

Vanderson easily won the first game but ran into some trouble in game two. Williams surprised Vanderson with some great gets and shots, then took the second game, but Vanderson wasn’t about to let this match slip away. Vanderson jumped out to a quick 6-0 lead, before Williams began to generate a lot of side outs and looked as though he would come back. OFFICIAL STRING OF THE USRA
The finals between these two great sportsmen had all the makings of a marathon. They began trading points early with long rallies, but neither player was able to establish control. Tucker overturned the referee’s skip call to give Vanderson an short-lived advantage at 3-4, and Both players kept the ball on the forehand side of the court, with every serve directed to the right. Vanderson pulled to a 7-5 lead, definitely playing his best all week, before Tucker took a strategic time-out. After regaining the serve, Tucker ran a string of five points with incredible drive serves to Vanderson’s backhand to take a 10-7 lead. The two then traded points and time outs to get to 13-10, with Tucker still leading, until Vanderson closed the gap to 13-12. A skipped setup by Vanderson gave Tucker game point advantage, but Vanderson regained serve after a time out. A Tucker skip and a flat roll out by Vanderson evened the score at 14 all. Back in the box after the next rally, Tucker laid in a second serve ace to Vanderson’s backhand to take game one.

Game two started out much the same, with both players hitting well and scoring points evenly up to 8-5 in Tucker’s favor. But that was as close as it would get. An aggressive Tucker took control by mixing up great backhands, precise passes, and hard serves to take the second game, and the match 15-7.

Crawford vs. Borland Again
The Women’s 18 & under the competition was familiar, as Brooke Crawford and Sara Borland once again found themselves in the finals. In her last year in the junior ranks, #1 seeded Crawford wanted to win this tournament as a boost for Worlds. “I really had to focus on the Junior Worlds in December to get focused for this event; winning this tournament will help me for

The first two games were hard fought by both, with Crawford taking the first 15-10 and looking as though she may cruise to a straight-game victory. But Borland had other ideas and began to execute her skills to win the second 15-12. With a large crowd anticipating a great tiebreaker, the two entered the court. Then, Crawford proved why she is #1. She came out hot and never cooled down, running away with the tiebreaker 11-0 to once again defeat Borland in the finals.

Ohio Sister Duos Shine
Sisters Adrienne and Kelley Fisher of Ohio made their presence felt in this year’s draw and finished very well. This was Adrienne’s first attempt to make the Junior National Team by competing in the 14 & under and the 16 & under. After losing in the quarters of the 16’s, she still had a chance in the 14’s. Not only did she make the team, but she won the 14 & under title. Her sister Kelley advanced to the finals of 12 & under without losing a game but lost the finals to Ashley Leggett.

Another Ohio-based “sister act” is made up of Crystal and Dominique Winfrey. Crystal competed in the 18 & under and the 16 & under and earned her spot on the Junior Team by making it to the semifinals of the 16’s. Dominique lost in the quarters of the 12 & under.

Up-and-comer Jose Rojas
One of the most talked about players of the tournament was Jose Rojas from California. Rojas won the 8 & under with no player scoring more than three points in any game. Jose also advanced to the finals of the 10 & under without losing a game, but was defeated in straight games by the event's only triple-gold medal winner, Nick Arturo.

Huczek Still on Track
In the 16's, Jack Huczek kept on his career track toward becoming the only player ever to win every junior division title twice. After losing a match he should have won in Houston, and losing badly to Vanderson in the High School Championships, he was definitely ready for this event.

His goals this week had been to work on his confidence and hit better passes, and in doing so he cruised through the draw, limiting opponents to only an average score of 4.3 points per game. The finals against Bart Crawford were no different, but it was the hardest match for Huczek. Neither player made many unforced errors during the match, but Huczek totally controlled center court and ran Crawford all over the remaining footage. Although Bart was hitting good shots, he wasn't killing the ball and Huczek got to just about everything. In the middle of the second game Crawford began to look fatigued and frustrated. The match ended with Huczek winning 15-7, 15-8, without his winning streak ever being in serious jeopardy.

No Racquet, Will Travel
Shannon Inglesby claimed the best story of the tournament. She won a Christie Van Hees autographed Head Ti 175 at the Tournament of Roses in Portland. She let her the tournament. She won a Christie Van Hees autographed Head Ti 175 at the Tournament of Roses and, Michelle had been the only girl they had not talked to from the Tournament of Roses and, when she arrived. After borrowing a racquet from the Head booth right before her match, Shannon ran into Michelle Gonzales. Michelle had been the only girl they had not talked to from the Tournament of Roses and, as luck would have it, she brought the racquet with her. Shannon was able to play with her autographed racquet and won that match. She then went on to become the Girls’ 10 and under national champion.

INTRODUCING THE TRIPLE THREAT DELIVERANCE:
THE HARDER YOU HIT,
THE HARDER THEY FALL.

Racquetball. It's a game of physical domination. It's letting your killer instinct take total control until the final point is won. In this sport, power is the ultimate weapon. It's the deciding factor between whether you conquer or cower. That's why we created the Triple Threat Deliverance. Our most powerful racquet ever. The key is a unique balanced weighting system of woven titanium, copper and carbon placed in three critical racquet locations: 10 o'clock, 2 o'clock and the bottom of the handle. End result: optimal power for you. And optimal pain for your opponent.

1. Jack Huczek has won every junior age division in every year that he has competed thus far. [No, Sudsy did not do that! He won each junior singles age division once.]
2. Michelle Gould never let anyone even get close during her heyday. It would have been nice to see Lynn Adams or Heather McKay, in their prime, compete against her.
3. Marty Hogan changed the game style.
4. Charlie Drake, for better or worse, had a major influence.
5. Doug Ganim for developing the U.S. OPEN and Ohio Super 7 series. Farrens has persistence and hosts the longest running pro stop (20 years?).
6. Hogan's charisma attracted sponsors and spectators.
7. D.P. Leach controlled the tour and its major players. Ektelon did the same with the amateur circuit.
8. Dave Peck's devastating injury kept him from becoming a serious threat to both Yellen and Hogan.
9. During its heyday, the word on racquetball!!
10. SGMA sponsored many amateur and professional programs. Promus Hotel Corporation provided an opportunity to attract outside sponsors.

The Century's Best ...

The "Draw of the Century?" shown on pages 26-27 takes a look at potential match-ups among the top-32 men's pro players of all time — and is meant for your pleasure and discussion. In attempting to analyze the players, Jim Hiser has placed athletes in the 'era' of their opponents (thus Sudsy with small racquets and slower ball). He has personally seen all of the selected athletes compete, plus solicited additional opinions from many of the "old timers" as well as newer pro's in researching the super-draw.

In the next issue we will advance two remaining rounds of the draws with the winners of the men's quarters and semis, plus add the women's companion round of 32, to present you with our choices for the top men's and women's players as we close out the 20th century. In the January/February issue of 2000, the winners will be announced!

Until then, along with these player evaluations, we'll also be compiling more Top-10 lists of the best and worst things to happen to racquetball ... including claims to the best forehand, backhand, doubles team, service game, etc.

Undoubtedly most everyone will have differing opinions on these matters, but hopefully this series will bring back fond memories of the sport as we count down to Y2K!
How to Use the Ceiling Shot as an Offensive Weapon

Laura Martino Makes Sacrifice to Get College Diploma

Remember, these ...?

Head-to-head

Round of 32

Hogan vs. Keeley ............... Too much power, Keeley's ceiling balls are ducks for Hogan
Doyle vs. Bledsoe ............... Bledsoe's speed forces Doyle to error out
Wagner vs. Guidry ............... Close, but Wagner's consistency gets edge
Muehleisen vs. Roberts ....... Roberts' power and shot-making ability destroys Dr. Bud
Brumfield vs. Inoue .......... Brumfield neutralizes Egan's power and mentally frustrates his opponent
Strandemo vs. Gregg Peck .... Peck's consistent backhand pinch makes the difference
Serot vs. Kachtik ............... Best match of 32s; Kachtik's determination gives him the slight edge
Greenfeld vs. Yellen .......... Yellen destroys Sherman's backhand serve; Sherman is exhausted and scores no points
Swain vs. Ferris ............... Swain's serve is too dominant, but Ferris surprises some people
Andrews vs. Ray ............... Mike's consistency allows him to capitalize on mistakes; lobs kill Andrews
Ellis vs. Obrenski ............... Great match; Ellis able to kill ball on crucial points
Dave Peck vs. Newman ...... Similar games, but Dave survives
Harnett vs. Schmitke ......... No contest — lefty Harnett's reverse pinch is on Hilecher vs. Mannino ......... Who intimidates the best? Mannino makes too many errors
Gonzalez vs. Myers .......... Closer than most think; Myers has chance, but doesn't capitalize
Neiderhoffer vs. Monchik .... Neiderhoffer's good for a game; Sudsy has too many weapons, but did look worried

Round of 16

Hogan vs. Bledsoe .............. A war — Hogan survives, but both are exhausted
Roberts vs. Wagner ............ Both have chance to win; Roberts aces out Brumfield vs. Gregg Peck ...... Brumfield gets into Gregg's head; Gregg's backhand is better, but fails under pressure!
Yellen vs. Kachtik ............. Yellen is just too consistent, Drew fights to end!
Swain vs. Ray .................. Ray just shakes his head; Swain dominates every area!
Dave Peck vs. Ellis ............ Peck goes to war — no holds barred — brings too much psych for John
Harnett vs. Hilecher .......... Harnett is too athletic, plays great, has too many weapons and can return the screen serve Monchik vs. Gonzalez .......... Student learned too well, but Sudsy not as dominant as many think!
Lesson 1.

With Hyper Carbon, all things are possible.

Hyper Carbon™ is the lightest, stiffest, strongest material ever used in racquets. And only Wilson has it. Hyper Carbon is 4-times stiffer, 4-times stronger and 65% lighter than titanium.

The Hyper 150g is the lightest racquetball racquet ever made. The maneuverability is amazing. Yet the incredible stiffness of Hyper Carbon and the trampoline effect of Power Holes™ technology create awesome power. With no vibration. And don’t worry about arm fatigue. The head-heavy Hammer Design® lets you generate maximum swing speed with no extra effort. I’ve never played anything like the Hyper 150g.

With all due respect, Cliff, the Hyper Air Hammer™ is the most powerful racquet in racquetball. The combination of Hyper Carbon and the 180-gram head heavy design really shortens the distance to the front wall. But the flexibility of Power Holes keeps the ball on the strings a split second longer, so you can control all that power. Players who hit first and ask questions later should get ready to rock.

When you buy either of these sensational Hyper Carbon racquets, you get “The Mind of a Champion”, Wilson’s new video starring Cliff and Derek, ABSOLUTELY FREE! That’s a $19.95 value.
Lesson 2.
All gloves are not created equal.

The next time you buy a racquetball glove take this quiz:

1) Is the glove made of premium SensiTouch™ Cabretta sheepskin leather?
2) Does it have a seamless one-piece palm and thumb to reduce bunching and blisters?
3) Does it feature dive protection on the knuckles and along the two outside fingers?
4) Is it great looking with lots of color?

(Hint: If you didn’t answer “Yes” to all 4 questions, buy the new Rage glove from Wilson.)

Lesson 3.
Performance and style are not mutually exclusive in a racquetball shoe.
(That means you can have them both in the same shoe.)

And this is the shoe – the Slash DST™ Mid. DynoSphere Technology™ in the midsole cushions your foot on impact, while DST insets in the forefoot and heel absorb any and all shock. The gum rubber outsole holds like an all-weather tire. And the styling? Let’s just say the Slash DST Mid is a winner with attitude.

Lesson 4.
Stop dreaming about a protective eyeguard that looks like sunglasses.

It’s here. It’s Vents. And it’s the hottest thing in racquetball eyewear: But even though Vents are hot, you’re not. Thanks to a unique ventilation system that increases airflow, Vents keep you feeling cool during the hottest action. And looking cool all the time.

Lesson 5.
Bag the old excuses... and the new equipment.

Once you move up to Hyper Carbon, you’ll need this new All Gear Bag. It features a full-length racquet pocket, zippered inside wet pocket, three accessory pockets and a detachable glove cord. There’s a place for everything – except excuses. You won’t need those now.

Lesson 6.
Just Get Hyper! It’s not the same old titanium racquetball anymore.

New Draw Format and Prize Money for IRT

The International Racquetball Tour unveiled major changes to its draw format and prize money distribution at the first stop of the 1999-2000 season in New Orleans. Effective this season, all IRT events (other than the Promus U.S. OPEN & Pro Nationals) have been shortened to this four-day schedule: Thursday night/Rounds of 64 & 32, Friday/Round of 16 & Quarterfinals, Saturday/Semifinals, Sunday/Final.

"This new format allows many players the opportunity to compete in the pro division since all play now begins Thursday night instead of Wednesday. In addition, it allows more spectators and amateur players to get a chance to see all the best players in the world over the course of a couple of days” commented IRT Commissioner Hank Marcus. “The intent was to make it easier in terms of time commitment and travel for the younger, up-and-coming players.”

The opportunity to arrive late on Thursday and be able to play the pros gives a number of new players the chance to experience the IRT” continued Marcus. The new draw format pre-sets the top eight seeds into the Round of 16, while the Rounds of 64 and 32 are played on Thursday night. “The new format works great and allows a number of new people to play in the pros who couldn't in the past. The draws are going to get tougher” commented top-ranked Sudsy Monchik.

In conjunction with the new draw format, IRT has re-structured the distribution of prize money to make sure those players who reach the Round of 16 will earn substantially more. “Once again this is an opportunity for IRT to reach out to the younger athletes and top regional players by making it easier and potentially more lucrative to play in tour events” added Marcus.

Willis Takes Over WIRT

The Women's International Racquetball Association recently named Ed Willis of Arlington, Va. as its new commissioner, effective with the 1999-2000 season. Willis, a long time tournament director and friend to the women's game, will begin his duties immediately. Willis takes over for Molly O'Brien who is moving on to a new career. "Ed brings a new enthusiasm and energy to WIRT that will translate into new events and sponsors. In addition he has spent many years working with the players on the WIRT tour and has their trust and support” commented Hank Marcus. “The contributions that Molly made to WIRT and the sport in general, over decades, is unmatched and she will be missed by all involved” added Marcus.

Anyone interested in information concerning WIRT can contact Ed Willis by Phone: 703-527-7785; Fax: 702-527-5298; or E-mail: EWillisII@aol.com

Sudsy's Magic Show
Featuring ... The Lob Serve!
Last issue I said I was going to make you tougher than tough from the service box by introducing you to my “Power Drive Serve.” I hope you’ve had a chance to practice it and incorporate it into your game.

Today I want to teach you my lob serve, which has become quite a weapon even at the professional level. Most players, pros and amateurs alike, love low and hard serves because the ball winds up in their hitting zone (below the knees) and they see that serve over 90 percent of the time. Using the lob serve as a first or second serve can be effective for three reasons:

1. The ball is hit softly, quite a change of pace from the 100+ mph ball hit during the power drive serve.

2. The ball is hit higher and is out of your opponent’s hitting zone (more like chest high or higher).

3. You have higher percentages of getting the ball over the short line which makes it an excellent second serve choice.

This concept mirrors a pitcher in baseball: If a pitcher only throws fast balls right over the middle of the plate the batter gets used to it and learns to handle them quite well.

If the pitcher then throws a change up, or changes where the ball goes over the plate, the batter will be kept off balance and guessing — and not get used to the same pitch over and over again.

In racquetball the concept of having variety in your serve, just like a pitcher has in baseball, is critical to forcing a weak return or no return at all (an ace). The change of pace and/or height can cause this weak return of serve.

Now let’s break down my lob serve so you too can have a dynamite first or second serve to cause those weak returns or — even better — no returns at all.
TRICK #1: THE READY POSITION

- Feet on the back line (short line), lined up about shoulder width apart next to one another
- Knees soft and relaxed
- Body erect
- Weight even (50/50)
- Racquet cocked up and waist high
- Eyes on ball
TRICK #2: THE STEP

• It's a one-step straight ahead motion, unlike the two-step drive serve motion, because we don't want to generate power
• A short step with the left foot (for righties) or right foot (for lefties)
• Front toe slightly opens to front corner
• Racquet goes back
• Knees continue to be soft and relaxed
• Weight shifts slightly to front foot (60/40)
• Body erect
• Eyes on ball
TRICK #3: The Swing
- Ball dropped off front foot about chest high
- Racquet begins to move across the body
- The step is completed
- Hips and shoulders begin to open
- Knees soft
- Body erect
- Weight slightly on front foot (55/45)
- Eyes on ball

TRICK #4: The Contact Point
- Legs in line with each other, weight back to 50/50
- Ball at full extension from body
- Racquet comes through, waist to chest high, slightly angled up so the ball lofts over the short line
- Wrist relatively stiff
- Hips and shoulders open even more, towards corner
- Back foot pivots and slightly bent
- Body erect
- Eyes on ball
TRICK #5: The Follow-Through

- Legs are completely in line with each other and weight is 50/50
- Racquet completely around and pointing to backwall
- Hips and shoulders completely open facing front wall
- Body erect
- Knees relaxed
- Eyes on ball

Well, you've now got the magic of my lob serve. Too often players get stuck on only serving the drive serves because it feels good, sounds good and looks good. But I caution you to learn and develop my magical lob serve because sooner or later as you move up the ranks you will need this very serve to strategically help you win a match.

Remember, if you are playing the power player, the big bruise who likes the balls hit low and hard, you will turn to the lob serve to defuse his power. The magic continues — stay tuned for next issue's magical show.
Pass or Kill? What should I do?

Good question since, at the USRA National Championships in Houston, I was asked that question all weekend long. At the same time, I had the pleasure of sitting next to my partner in crime, Sudsy Monchik — the #1 pro ranked player in the world, while we coached Eric Muller against Chris Wright in the round of 16.

Throughout the entire match we told Eric to pass, pass, pass because of Chris's position: too far forward (in front of the dotted line). And it was ironic we told Eric in the close tiebreaker not to skip the ball, and he won the match on a backhand down-the-line pass. Sudsy and I turned to each other, high five'd and said, “it's about time.”

Before we go any further, let's define a pass, a pass-kill and a kill:

PASS — bounces twice before the backwall and hits 18” and lower on the front wall.

PASS-KILL — bounces twice before the dotted line and hits 12” and lower on the front wall.

KILL — bounces twice before the short line and hits 6” and lower on the front wall.

Food for thought

I think everyone would agree the kill shot is the lowest percent shot possible of all three of these shots because a 6” target is harder to hit than an 18” or 12” target.

More food for thought

The national average of hitting a kill shot from the dotted line is 30 percent. I think we all agree that the odds of effectively killing the ball diminish the deeper you go in the court.

I work with the top-three male professionals in the game today at my camps, and they all advocate that if they had a choice to win the rally with a pass or kill, they would always elect the pass. It's a sure thing. It's money in the bank. They all learned the hard way coming up the ranks. They told me: “The more you attempt to kill, the more you skip. The more you skip, the more matches you lose.” Pretty simple philosophy.

A good general rule of thumb

Pass or Pass-Kill when your opponent is in front of you or boxed in against either side wall.

Kill when your opponent is behind you and you are on, or in front of, the dotted line.

I read this back in the 80's (from one of the pros) and it's always stuck in my mind ... “Pass for the dough, kill for show!”

Good luck in your passing game — the odds are in your favor.
Q: &A... Q&A

I play racquetball 3-4 times a week and have found my skill getting progressively better over the past three years. My problem is I'm stuck in no man's land between A and Open. I've been told that need to spend time on the court alone, just hitting, to progress to the next level. When I do this, I find myself getting bored or playing sloppy, practicing bad shots more than good ones. Could you address this issue and talk about 1-2 drills that I can do while practicing alone on the court?

Jeff Marmer | Loveland, Ohio

Short and Focused Practice Sessions

If you assume that you have to practice for at least one hour, and you go into a drill session without a plan, then your practice can be tedious and boring. Instead, break your practice down into 10-minute segments. I think most of us can concentrate on a task for ten minutes. Pick only one or two areas to work on, and start out with only 1-3, ten-minute segments.

For instance, you decide you want to hit better down-the-line passing shots with your forehand. For ten minutes, set yourself up with a short ceiling ball, and hit down-the-line pass shots. The key is to be picky and specific for those ten minutes. Don't accept a killshot, or a ball that hits the sidewall or comes off the back wall too high. The tougher your expectations are during practice, the easier it will be to make the shot in a match. After you finish the first 10-minute session, walk off the court, get a drink of water and analyze what you need to do to make the next 10-minute session better. Complete 1 to 3 sessions, then move into a second skill. It's best to stick to only two skills, keeping your practice session short and focused.

Rally Ending Shots

There are three types of shots we hit when we play racquetball... a ball we hit on the run; one that is hit right at us and we have to use our reactions; and the shot where we have time to plant our feet and step in to the ball, or... the setup! Guess what? We get an abundance of setups every match, every game and every rally! If we could just execute a high percentage of our setups, our skill level would improve dramatically. Just think, if you have one hundred setups per game, and you can end the rally 50 times instead of 30 times, how much easier it would be to win games. What is a setup? The three most common setups are a ceiling ball that drops short, a ball off the back wall, and a pinch that is hit high and rebounds off the third wall. So in your 10-minute drill session, hit yourself a setup and work on a specific shot, over and over.

When you repetitively work on a shot, your muscles remember the feelings and the motions. The more you hit a shot in practice, the easier it is to hit in a match. Oh, and one last hint... during your drill session, envision yourself in an open match. See your opponent in good court position, ready to pounce on your shot. See yourself in a specific situation, such as 10-9 in the tiebreaker. Now, give yourself that short ceiling ball set-up. Can you end the rally? Can you hit the pinch, the killshot, the pass? This will add the mental dimension to any workout that you can do. Stick with it, even through the frustration, and you will be rewarded!
A New Phenomenon: Cross-String Breakage

String breakage used to be almost entirely confined to the main strings (the vertical ones); the problem virtually never affected the cross strings (the horizontal ones). But since the introduction of new racquets with oversize faces and unusual stringing designs, cross-string breakage has become a problem for some players. And it's a conundrum for stringers (and string manufacturers, too), because even the pros aren't sure what's going on. So this column is actually a request for help, as you'll see below.

In a past column (March/April 1997), we discussed the four typical causes of string breakage. "Sawing" or "cutting" occurs when the mains and crosses shift and pound against one another, so that eventually the crosses cut right through the mains. A particularly hard smash — especially if it's a mis-hit outside the sweet spot and close to the frame — may stretch the string beyond its tensile limits and cause "catastrophic" breakage. Cracked grommets may cut through the string right near the frame. And frequent wall-bangers may abrade the string where it passes outside the head of the frame, but only if the racquet's bumper strip is absent. Only the first two causes are common.

At this point, information about cross-string breakage is still mostly anecdotal, and we don't have enough data to even know where the strings are breaking most often. One stringer tells me that it's occurring in crosses three through five (from the top), close to the centerline of the racquet. Another reports that it's mostly confined to crosses two and three, close to the top), near the centerline of the racquet. Another reports that it's mostly confined to crosses two and three, close to the top. Yet another says it mainly shows up in Kevlar®-nylon hybrid sets.

They all agree, however, that thinner strings are more susceptible to the problem, so there's your "easy" answer. If you don't care why it's happening, shift from a thin 17 gauge string to a thicker 16 gauge one. Be forewarned, however, that you will trade off some playability.

For those of us who do wonder, here are some speculations as to why. The bigger the racquet, the more "open" the string pattern — in other words, the string spacing is wider. (This is especially so in racquets with a "fan"-shaped pattern, where the mains radiate out from a point near the handle.) This seems to allow the strings to shift around more against each other, but why it should suddenly represent a problem for the crosses, as opposed to the mains, is still a mystery.

Along with making racquets larger, the manufacturers have (amazingly) made them lighter as well. Light weight means players can swing the racquet faster, to hit the ball harder. If we're really hitting harder than before, that might explain an increase in breakage. But again — why the crosses? Could players be swinging so hard now that they're losing control, and making more mis-hits? Or maybe the larger racquet heads encourage mis-hits in some other way?

The Kevlar® aramid is a fairly abrasive material. In hybrid sets consisting of Kevlar® and nylon strings, the Kevlar® is always the main string. This seems to explain why the crosses are breaking in these hybrid sets, but it doesn't help us when it comes to all-nylon string jobs, or other hybrid combinations. You might try changing the tension of your strings, or using different tensions for the mains and the crosses in hybrid sets, and see if that has an effect.

So we don't know why cross strings are breaking, but we'd like to, so that we can address it. What we need is data about breakage. Next time you break a cross-string, please send me as much of the information shown below as you can.

For providing valuable input for this article, special thanks to: Don Barrington of the River Bend Athletic Club, Peace Dale, RI; and Rex Lawler, Lawler Court Products, Terre Haute, IN.

changing times
by Luke St. Onge

I have just returned from what I believe was the greatest racquetball event ever held in the short history of our sport — the 1999 Pan American Games. For many reasons, this experience was truly exceptional.

For the first time, racquetball was fully integrated into the single most-important multi-national sports competition outside the Olympic Games themselves. This provided us with an opportunity to showcase our sport for the many international sport federation presidents in attendance, as well as his excellency, Juan Antonio Samaranch and PASO President Mario Vazquez Rana, both of whom observed racquetball for the first time.

The portable court was a standout in itself, as press and spectators surrounded it in packed stands from the quarterfinals on. The court was set up in Winnipeg's main tennis facility, the Winnipeg Winter Club, which took our sport out of the fitness arena and into the “main stadium.” Just as impressive was the use of a full referee contingent of uniformed Level III International Officials, along with assigned line judges for each and every match. This type of formal staging gave our athletes the best possible backdrop for their finest performances.

Racquetball was presented side-by-side in the same venue with squash. With both our portable courts featured, there was no contest, in my mind. For the first time, spectators could make a direct comparison between the two, and racquetball came out well ahead. Why? The bright court, the athleticism, the crack of the ball, the speed, the excitement of the crowd — there was just no comparison.

And what of the other comparisons? As the “Rodney Dangerfield” of racquet sports, ‘we don’t get no respect.’ Clearly the biggest difference between the two sports is cold, hard cash. Squash has financial resources that racquetball does not. It’s just that simple.

I would like to thank the following people who made this opportunity a reality: Dr. Roger Jackson, Chairman of the PASO Technical Commission; Mike Moore, Vice President of Sports for Winnipeg; and Keith Calkins, President of the Pan American Racquetball Confederation. Also thanks to the staff of the Winnipeg Winter Club, the presidents of the National Olympic Committees of Argentina, Bolivia, Canada, Chile, Dominican Republic, Guatemala, Honduras, Mexico, Puerto Rico, USA and Venezuela. A special thanks to Technical Director Jim Hiser and the International Referees and linesmen who adjudicated this important event objectively and with the dignity it deserved.

Finally, our warmest thanks to the wonderful people of Winnipeg, Manitoba, Canada, who opened their hearts and embraced racquetball as a major sport in the Pan American Games.

It's Racquetball's Premier Event.....and you're invited!

If you've never been to Memphis for the Promus U.S. OPEN, this should be the year that you treat yourself to the ultimate experience our sport has to offer. The Promus Hotel Corporation U.S. OPEN Racquetball Championships, December 1-5, will be a celebration of the sport that will provide "sensory overload" for anyone who loves this game. If you've attended in any one of the past three years, you already know that this event is not to be missed. What you don't know is that we've planned newer and even more exciting additions to make this year's event better than ever!

So you've never attended the Promus U.S. OPEN. What can you expect? For starters, you'll take part in the only racquetball event to attract all the top players in the world as pros battle for the largest prize money purse of the year...over $45,000! The world's best amateurs also join the action ... 13 different countries were represented in last year's event, including elite athletes from Bolivia, Canada, Germany, Ireland, Japan, Mexico, the Netherlands and Puerto Rico. It's like nothing you have ever seen. The dazzling made-for-TV portable racquetball court, with stadium seating for over 1,000 fans, will make you feel like you're sitting inside the court with 180 mph rockets shooting right past your body.

But before any of that even begins, high-energy athlete presentations will give you goosebumps. Booming music, laser light shows, dramatic player introductions, live on-court entertainment between games, state-of-the-art video scoreboard, and fan fair activities will keep you entertained non-stop. The hours will seem like minutes.

When you're not watching your favorite pros do battle, the Promus U.S. OPEN offers tons of excitement in the Hospitality Village, which features all the major racquetball manufacturers displaying the latest and greatest racquetball gear on the market. The Village also includes a cash bar and concession area, a Racquetball Museum, live stage with entertainment, Souvenirs, and other off-court activities for your enjoyment.

Nobody likes to whoop it up more than racquetball players and the Promus U.S. OPEN is happy to oblige with a Tuesday evening get together in the Hospitality Village, an International Reception on Wednesday evening, an incredible Casino Night on Thursday night, and a Player's Dance Party in the pub on Friday night. Then to top it all off, on Saturday evening over 800 racquetball fans will gather for the greatest racquetball celebration of the year — the Party with the Pros! This grand gala event features elegant ice carvings, an incredible hors d'oeuvres buffet, multimedia slide show, silent auction for St. Jude Children's Research Hospital, cash bar, huge dance floor, and one of the hottest dance bands in the South (bring your disco shoes). Amateur players competing in the Promus U.S. OPEN will be admitted free. Guests of players will be charged only $25.

If all this weren't enough to keep you occupied, you also have the option of competing in one of the 88 different amateur divisions offered for every skill and age level, including men's, women's, and mixed doubles (new for 1999!). All amateur matches are played at one of three nearby facilities (University of Memphis, Wimbledon Sportsplex, and The Racquet Club), with regular shuttle service between all three and the host hotels. No need to rent a car! Commemorative Promus U.S. OPEN medals will be given to the top four finishers in each division.

So you've been to the Promus U.S. OPEN before. What's new for 1999? LOTS! For starters we've added a special International Reception on Tuesday evening. This event will honor all the players and fans who have traveled from outside the United States to attend.

September – October 1999
Another major addition is amateur doubles divisions for men, women, and mixed teams making the Promus U.S. OPEN the only major USRA event to offer both singles and doubles divisions for all levels of adult play. If you would like to play doubles but don’t have a partner, simply send in your entry form with “find” written on the line for partner’s name and we will set you up. Who knows, you may meet your next best friend!

And once again, we’ve upgraded the Saturday evening Grand Gala — Party with the Pros. This year’s theme will be “DISCO” and we have hired one of the most entertaining 70's style bands in the U.S. — Dr. Zarr and the Funkmiesters. Dance the night away to your favorite tunes from the past and you may want to bring a camera. This band puts on quite a show!

So it’s your grandmother’s 100th birthday and you can’t attend the 1999 Promus U.S. OPEN. How can you deal with the depression? The all new Promus U.S. OPEN website — www.promususopen.com — is the answer! This exciting new racquetball cybersite will be updated throughout the tournament including the latest results, digital photos from the event, and a daily event newsletter published by Racquetball Magazine. Dial up the 1999 Promus U.S. OPEN throughout the week — it will be the next best thing to being there! Visit www.promususopen.com now for a digital version of the entry form and ticket application.

So what do I do now?! The first thing you need is to get your hands on an Entry Form/Ticket Application. It was located in the center of the last issue of Racquetball Magazine (July/August). If you missed it you can view it at www.promususopen.com or call the USRA at (719/635-5396) to have one mailed out to you. Entries are already pouring in and the draw will be limited to the first 600 entries received (this event sells out every year!). Ticket sales for the pro matches are already brisk and you must purchase tickets in advance to be guaranteed a seat (and take advantage of package discounts). Act now so you won’t be left out of what will be the most exciting racquetball event of the year — The 1999 Promus Hotel Corporation U.S. OPEN Racquetball Championships!

What They’re Saying about Impact ...

Hank Marcus, IRT Commissioner — The greatest impact of the Promus U.S. OPEN — beyond the tremendous excitement, energy, and exposure it brings to the sport — is the opportunity for all factions to work together. USRA, IRT, WIRT and the manufacturers coming together for the common good of the sport itself may sound trite and obvious but many said it would never happen. In fact, the opportunity for all to work together on this event has fostered a trust and relationship that will benefit the sport as we move into the new millennium.

Doug Ganim, HEAD USA — Of course I am definitely a bit biased because of the role I have played in getting the Promus U.S. OPEN off the ground ... however I sincerely believe that the USRA’s creation of this event will be looked back on years from now as a key development in our sport’s history and the absolute turning point where the sport began to regain its popularity. The significance of the event lies in the fact that we now have a bona fide template on how to accomplish two significant factors that will shape the future of racquetball. The first is how to successfully televise professional racquetball so that the average sports enthusiast can enjoy the show, and the second is to create a racquetball event worthy of significant “outside the sport” sponsorship dollars. We must now use this model to expand the visibility and popularity of the sport.

Amy Wishingrad, PENN Racquet Sports — As the largest manufacturer of racquetballs in the world, PENN was thrilled to see the USRA develop the Promus U.S. OPEN Racquetball Championships. The sport needed a major event to jump start interest and enthusiasm. Now racquetball has its first real “Grand Slam” event — the Promus U.S. OPEN. From my perspective, racquetball’s future looks brighter than ever!

Suds Monchik, #1 ranked player in the world and two-time Promus U.S. OPEN Champion — I think it means everything! Ever since I was a little boy all I have dreamed about was playing racquetball in front of huge crowds, and on national television. Just when I thought my dreams were nothing more than silly childhood wishes, the Promus U.S. OPEN Racquetball Championships was born and everything I had hoped for became an instant reality. The portable court, over 1,000 screaming fans, ESPN2, a large prize money purse (yea I still like money!), and all the other first class amenities and perks make this event absolutely awesome. What we need is twelve more!

Ron Grimes, President, E-FORCE — The Promus U.S. OPEN Racquetball Championships is the first showcase event in the sport of racquetball. This is significant for a couple of key reasons. First, if racquetball is going to go anywhere substantially as a sport we are going to need a series of major showcase events to keep the excitement level consistently high. This vision needs to start somewhere and what we have in the Promus U.S. OPEN is that all important first step. Second, we desperately need to proclaim the benefits of participating in the sport of racquetball to as much of the general public as we possibly can. These benefits include touting the fitness, fun, social interaction, and friendships that the sport can bring to peoples lives. The Promus U.S. OPEN, and future similar events, attracts television and other media exposure which gives us an excellent platform to tell people how playing racquetball can improve the quality of life.

Sharlene Sones, General Manager, Ektelon — The Promus U.S. OPEN Racquetball Championships is an important annual event for the sport of racquetball. It brings amateur players, pro players, and racquetball fans together for a true celebration of the sport. In addition, the television exposure and media attention the event garners represents a strong start towards getting racquetball’s popularity moving upward.

The Line on the Men
by Lefty O’Neill

The word on the street is that promoter Doug Ganim is going to bring in Michael Buffer to do the intro for the finals on Sunday. “Let’s get ready to rumble ... !!” Lights, camera, action. This event has brought out the highest level of play in the world. The past three finals have been nothing short of awesome. Be sure to move around and see all the players ... especially in the early rounds! Some of the best matches I have ever seen took place on the back courts of the Racquet Club of Memphis. But once the action begins remember: 1) the following odds are subject to change; 2) I cannot be held responsible for any bar rounds lost; 3) any and all wagering is illegal in the state of Tennessee.

Sudsy Monchik “The Kid” [1-7] — Can’t touch this ... This is a huge event for someone who wants to be remembered as the best to ever play the game. So even if Suds wins every other stop all year but loses this one to Cliff, people will say “Yea, you were great but you lost to Swain twice at the US OPEN.” Sudsy is playing equal to any legendary pro in their prime, such as: Swain, Yellen, Hogan, Brumfield. His ability to shuffle his feet, get to the ball (diving if necessary), and then kill it is awesome. He puts his opponents under so much pressure with his big serves, effortless re-kills and blind quickness. If you ask him, he’d probably say “I crush a lot” and “Where’s the first place check?” Recently wed, “The kid” is extremely happy and content on and off the court.

Cliff Swain [5-1] — I, I want to be like Cliff ... In his illustrious 14-year career, Cliff has lost count of the many tournaments he’s won (my guess is 70+), but in the last 11 months, he’s not taken a single final on the IRT TOUR. But I still love this guy — even though he stole my last two girlfriends, before I was married. It will be a cold day in hell before he meets my wife. Wait a minute ... my son Paul has really skinny ankles, big hips and long lanky arms. Mary Helen!! Cliff has an almost flawless record against everyone on tour except Sudsy. His serve percentage is down against Sudsy because the pressure to hit a good one is so high. He has to change his serve pattern and end the rally as quick as possible to have a chance to win. And even though he’s lost the last few tournaments I don’t ever count Cliff out. He is a winner.

John Ellis “Ellie” [9-1] — One of my greatest thrills at IRT events is watching Ellie get a set up at the short line, then crush it cross court about 180 mph. Always a crowd favorite here, John aims to please with his tough play and laid-back “California” attitude. “Ellie” can be found touring with Barnum and Bailey Circus in the off season — he’s the one being shot out of the cannon. To win in Memphis, John has to shorten his swing in the front court and hit a higher percentage of re-kills. And it wouldn’t hurt to serve and shoot like a madman.

Jason Mannino “J” [9-1] — If you ever wondered how Ruben Gonzales played in his prime, catch one of Jason’s matches. A fearless retriever with great racquet skills, Jason dives as many times as it takes to win the rally. In a close match against Sudsy in New Orleans, “J” dove at least 50 times ... because his dad Russ said he’d buy him a Snickers every time he did. A two-time tour winner, Jason is a nightmare to play. Whether he’s yelling at himself, you, the crowd, or the ref, he will do anything to wear you down. Oddly, he has a reputation for fair play. You might think that because he tries so hard to win he would take calls like some of the other pro’s.

Tim Doyle “TD” [11-1] — You wanna win or what? Tim just moved to San Diego to run E-Force’s player program. So, any chance you get, make sure to talk to him about becoming sponsored and getting lots of free gear. Currently ranked #7 Tim has come back from a series of nagging injuries. Formerly ranked as high as #2 Tim has to work on his footwork to beat the top dogs. A great serve and shooter, I would like to see Tim give up the game because I can’t beat him.

Andy Roberts “The King” [12-1] — Who do ya like? The pride of Memphis, Andy had some injuries last season that hurt his ranking. He was supposed to retire last season but his wife Kim kicked him out of the house. Andy has to find his form of old when he shot about 90 percent from the field. His speed has always been his Achilles heel, so some big serves will help.

www.promususopen.com
Adam Karp “Fishsticks” [13-1] — 1999 Pan American champion and winner of every recent amateur title you can think of, Adam covers the court like a blanket. The only thing he needs to work on to beat the top dogs is his drive serve and power. If you want to see some great athleticism, open up the tank, sprinkle some food in and watch him go.

Mike Guidry [13-1] — A diving machine and fitness freak, Mike has incredible endurance. To do well he must develop a game plan against the top players. Mike has so much talent and energy he has a tendency to just run-and-gun and not focus on his opponent’s weaknesses. Unless he is playing me, and then he just beats me like drum. Mike coached Chile this past summer at the Pan American Games, where they won their first Pan Am medal, ever!

Derek Robinson [13-1] — If you’re ever up in the tri-cities in Washington state, give big “D” a call and go get some of grandma’s jam, it’s great. In Memphis, the big man has to mix up his serves and move those long legs. One of the best short-hoppers in the game, he is very hard to lob serve. He is also hard to pass and is deceptively quick with a long reach. He plays the top players tough, but has to stay focused in the earlier rounds.

Eric Muller [14-1] — He would be about 8-1 if he wasn’t working full-time. Watch out for this guy — he loves this event! A scrappy competitor who played well in Houston at the amateur nationals and should be tough. Check the waistline if he shows up. If he’s carrying an extra 20, I want him.

Field [35-1] — The field will be chock-full of tough, tough players who could break through to the quarters or even semi’s. But after that they’ll be swallowed up by the bigger fish.

And the Women’s “Book” • by Jim Hiser

Jackie Paraiso [1-1] — Now that she’s re-focusing on singles, she’ll have plenty of desire to avenge her loss at the USRA National Championship. Although she won the ’98 Promus U.S. Open, her semi-final loss in Houston put a damper on her season. She has the best all-around game, covers the court better than most of her opponents and has better shot-making skills from deep court. She has the motivation, desire and revenge factors in her favor. Beware!

Cheryl Gudinas [2-1] — Riding high after her best season ever with wins at the USRA nationals and the Pan Ams, she’s finally emerged from playing “second fiddle” to Gould and definitely has the tools to win her first U.S. Open. Needs offensive service weapon to hang with Jackie and must be emotionally prepared for Robin Levine and Christie Van Hees, both of whom have service games and determination on their sides. Could use more first-step quickness, but always comes prepared for the big events.

Christie Van Hees [2-1] — Her disappointing 11-10 loss at Pan Ams should provide fire for revenge. She probably has the best drive serve on the tour, but will she stick with it? On the receiving end, she struggles with serves to her forehand and needs to be more consistent with her returns. She seems to improve with every event, but her seeding may determine if she makes finals. She plays Cheryl tough, but has trouble with Jackie.

Robin Levine [3-1] — Everything depends on which Robin shows up. Over the past year, she’s played like Wonder Woman (in Mexico) and like Todd O’Neil (bad! bad!) in Bolivia and Houston. She’s probably the most dangerous of the seeded players, since you can never know what game she’ll bring to the court! But whatever she brings, her opponents know that they can’t take anything for granted; they’re in for a fight! Most inconsistent of the top seeds, but also the most dangerous if she’s hot! She’ll dive as much as it takes to win any rally, with little regard for walls or floor. She’ll give her opponents all they can handle. Or not.

Laura Fenton [5-1] — Laura finally broke into the top-four at “The Finals.” Over the past 12 months, she’s shown increasing signs of brilliance — like her comeback against Cheryl in Houston. She’s also shown inattentiveness, or complete absence — like her low-scoring loss to Christie at the Pan Ams. Her tendency to lapse into a defensive mode allows opponents to dictate the pace, and she needs to gain control over that particular factor to stay in the game. She needs to get (and stay) aggressive, develop a more consistent drive serve and go for it! Has nothing to lose.

The Field — Kersten Hallander seems to have talent and potential, but needs consistency to eliminate unforced errors. Lydia Hammock needs her best game (and perhaps divine intervention) to break into the semi’s. Kerri Stoffregen must play tougher competition regularly to advance against this field, but she has upset potential. Chile’s Angela Grisar has tons of talent, but needs more experience; coached by Mike Guidry, she’ll move up sooner than expected so don’t take her for granted.
